Olivet Nazarene College Kankakee, Illinois

They to Hadrice Molice

They had no choice but to take notice of the city within the city. The smokestack with the bold, white ONC enscribed down the side stands above the rest of Kankakee.

With our crumbly runs, late skates, trips to the park (in sweats), car washes, prayer band, chapel services, late nights in Chicago, midnight runs to Hardee's, and fans heard from miles around on a Saturday afternoon, "They Had to Notice."

With the lifestyles portrayed on campus, and the achievements and activities both academically and spiritually, each student stood out in his own way. By this notability on campus, students were noticed off campus as well. These endeavors made a difference; therefore, "They Had To Notice." Photo by G. Wickersham

THEY HAD TO NOTICE

Following his undergraduate work at Bethany Nazarene College, Dr. Snowbarger spent three and one half years in the service during W.W. II as a naval lieutenant. He then pursued his master's and doctorate at Oklahoma University and the University of California: Berkley. In the fall of 1949, he came to Olivet as an assistant professor in the history department. After being a full-time teacher for four years, Dr. Snowbarger was named Academic Dean in 1953.

After sixteen years at Olivet, Dr. Snowbarger accepted the position of Secretary of Education in Kansas City. There he was active in helping the new Nazarene institutions — Mount Vernon, Mid-America, and Bible College — get started. He was also involved in their site selection and in writing their constitutions and bylaws prior to their getting presidents.

Five years later in the summer of 1970, President Harold W. Reed was anxious to welcome Dr. Snowbarger back to Olivet to resume the position as Academic Dean. Upon retirement this year, he will have put in another sixteen years at Olivet.

As Vice President for Academic Affairs and Dean, Dr. Snowbarger's contributions to Olivet have been too numerous to count. Many of the innovations he has been responsible for (i.e. freshman orientation) have become so commonplace on our campus, (and others, after our example), that today they're no longer recognized as innovations.

Two of Dr. Snowbarger's major contributions, however, include attaining North Central Accreditation in 1956 and the starting of the graduate programs at Olivet.

Dr. Snowbarger is the kind of man who could've succeeded at any profession. So why did he choose Academic Dean at Olivet? Dr. Snowbarger relates, "I had to ask myself, 'What do I want to do?' And what I wanted to do was to contribute to the lives of young people in their formative years when a lot of decisions are being made. The most important decisions of their lives, perhaps. The choice of vocation, the choice of your mate, and settling matters spiritually are things going on in these years that are absolutely determinative as far as the future is concerned, and I've always gotten along with students. And if I can help them and be a friend to them through those years, then to me, that's the best way to invest my life in the future."

From the president's viewpoint, Dr. Parrott relates, "Dr. Snowbarger has given solidarity and integrity which has never been compromised to the academic program of ONC."

During his thirty-two years at Olivet, Dr. Snowbarger has continued to represent unquestioned integrity, inspiring all who've come in contact with Olivet. He has been an example of one possessing both professional excellence and uncompromising Christian standards.

Dr. Snowbarger has embodied the ideal, a way of life that they had to notice. (J. Martinson)

During the Country Western BBQ, Dr. Snowbarger grins his winning smile. He also stopped to chat with graduate Rhonda Knox.

Dr. Leslie Parrott

Dr. Parrott pauses to enjoy the Homecoming Football game. As you can clearly see, "The Race Is On" was the theme for 1985 Homecoming festivities.

At the Education Service of the Nazarene General Assembly in Anaheim Stadium, California, Dr. Parrott spoke on the vital relationship between the Church of the Nazarene and her colleges, growing together through eight decades.

Dr. and Mrs. Parrott rekindle old friendships with Bill and Gloria Gaither. The Gaithers are known world-wide for their gospel music. Photos by G. Wickersham

We all came home from the General Assembly in Anaheim with the Quadrennial theme ringing in our ears and constantly resurging itself in our minds: THAT THEY MAY KNOW.

Early in the fall I tried to explain our spiritual stand in non-theological terms to a Rotary Club. I talked about the Presence which we believe lives within us. I mentioned the inner light of the Quakers and the born-again movement among evangelicals. But for us Nazarenes, the most important spiritual concern is the indwelling Presence of the Holy Spirit.

I guess that explanation to those Rotarians increased my gratitude and made me more sensitive to the presence of God in my own life and for all we have going for us in the Church of the Nazarene.

I love this college because I believe it is the work of God and an extension of the Presence of God in this great Midwest section of our country. I love the Midwest and our conservative ways. I believe in what we are doing. I want to thank you for giving the opportunity to serve as President of the greatest holiness college in the world. # N EW BEGINNINGS

The graduates of 1985 left their graduation with every expectation of beginning a new dimension of a successful life. At the close of the final ceremony, each went his own way in hopes of accomplishing goals. The speaker, Dr. Mark R. Moore, said it best when he stressed the importance of God's will in relation to success. "You will find, as I have, outside of God's will there is no success, and within God's will there is no failure."

For many, a college career was a stepping stone of preparation for a new beginning, in which each has begun. These graduates were noticed as individuals as well as a group. They left a mark on campus and continue to do so, in successfully reached goals. (Z. Burdine)

EXTRAORDINARY

BEGINNINGS

It began with moving in, at least one-hundred boxes from the car to the fourth floor. It continued with the first weekend of the long-standing tradition of "Ollies Follies." And what an event that was. The Juniors finally made the campus stand and "take notice." It was truly an extraordinary day when the "Senior Class" was defeated.

The first week of school was when each student would set his pace for the entire year. Most started at a good pace, "back and forth in the Quad." The first couple of weeks also brought about many fund raisers, in which a new event was added by MRA, the first water slide party. Car washes were always a big success, along with class tee shirts and candy bar sales.

These events seemed to dim the fears and anxieties of beginning a new year. Friendships were made, and school spirit displayed. Students were noticed not only by friends, but also through first impressions. Q (Z. Burdine) ieces to the Student Life puzzle were embedded together differently by each student. After adjustments were made, priorities set, and schedules changed time and time again, the pieces fell into place.

Pyramids, balloon send-offs, egg tosses, cart races, skits, talent, volleyball, tug-of-war, and football combined to form the Ollies Follies link. The participants in these activities, as well as the supporters, were noticed not only by peers but also by faculty and community spectators.

Kansas City Royals, Chicago Bears, pep rallies, basketball games, retreats, late skates, tennis and intramurals were part of the cascade of athletic and recreational links. Those who participated were noticed by their skill and dedication.

The spiritual link which all students needed to complete their puzzle were met through a variety of sources. Some students found giving personal testimonies in Prayer Band completed the gaps in their puzzle. For others, sermons in church were fulfilling. Floor devotions contributed to the puzzle of those who spoke in them. They were unaware that those around them noticed the Lord's presence in their lives. Whatever the source, no puzzle was complete without the spiritual link.

Crumbly runs, popcorn parties, pillow fights, pulling all-nighters, rap sessions, and jamming . . . were linked to dorm life. Those noticed were the ones who shared the most.

Term papers, essay exams, geology labs, foreign languages, and collateral reading helped make up the academic link. Those noticed the most were students who studied during class parties, actually read collateral reading, researched their topic for term papers, and learned vocabulary. These students everyone noticed. They were respected by students and faculty.

Each one of us had our own individual puzzle; how we linked it was up to us. No matter what our links turned out the puzzle was completed, and therefore "They Had To Notice."

Looking beyond beauty

Queen and court were noticed for inner-beauty

It was Thursday, October 17th, 1985 at 7:30 p.m. The scene was that of a Southern plantation porch surrounded by a garden. The event was the coronation of a new Homecoming Queen based on the beauty described in I Peter 3:4. "Your beauty should be . . . that of your inner self, the unfading beauty of a gentle and quiet spirit, which is of great worth in God's sight."

The evening began with prayer by Betsy Norris, Women's Residents Association President and the singing of "Father's Eyes" by Cyndi Larson. Following this song, the emcee for the evening, Professor Don Toland, introduced the candidates. As these ladies entered in beautiful white gowns with the class presidents and the ASG president as their escorts, they were welcomed by young girls who shared a kiss and presented two red roses to the candidates.

The ladies then greeted the crowd with smiles as they walked around the runway to the voices of their fathers sharing special thoughts about their daughters' lives. When each candidate had been intro duced, Reverend Tom Sikes sang to the court "Never be the Same." Then Miriam Reeder, the 1984 Homecoming Queen, was introduced. The grand finale came and the Queen was announced. The first lady of Olivet, Mrs. Lora Lee Parrott, read, "The 1985 Homecoming Queen is Miss Teresa Ulmet."

The 1985 Coronation was a lovely time of honoring five beautiful ladies. Even though not everything went perfectly, overall the evening went great and the Women's Residents Association Council was relieved and thrilled that their hard work had paid off. ©

Everyone's a winner

Both fans and athletes enjoy homecoming

The weekend of October 18th through the 20th, a very exciting event took place on our campus, Homecoming 1985. Homecoming has always been, and will continue to be, one of the major events of the year.

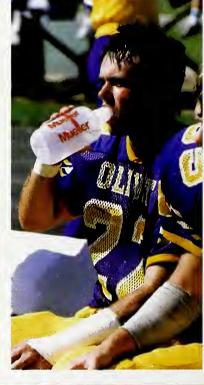

For the students, Homecoming was full of busy happenings. It meant the coronation of a new Queen and her court, the special Friday morning chapel service, an opportunity to cheer at the basketball, soccer, and football games, concerts, the outdoor barbecue in Snowbarger Athletic Park, and a 5-kilometer run through the campus.

Homecoming was also a time for families and alumni to visit. Every five years classes gather for reunions and reminisce about their Alma Mater.

Whatever the reason for being at Homecoming 1985, the spirit and pride of our college was felt and shared. (K. Dexter)

Some faces continually had a smile on them. Those faces cheered others, as they went through the hectic days knowing somehow they'd get everything done. Other faces showed disappointment or a little loneliness.

New faces showed up every fall Freshmen and transfers provided noticeable faces on campus when everyone was fired of looking at the familiar ones. Faces that had come from California, ones that had come from Maine. New faces meant new people to get to know, fresh relationships, close friendships that formed during the year and last forever.

Then, in May, the seniors walked across the platform to receive their diplomas that they'd worked so hard for Familiar faces now were headed into ar unfamiliar world. Joy and tears were recognized on faces as hugs were given and goodbyes were said. Olivet faces were special and they were always noticed. (N. Aylor) ①

Campus romance

Love blossoms in surprising ways

When relationships blossomed around us, it became important for us to realize that we had a more intimate relationship that took priority, that with the Lord. An anonymous writer summed it up best...

Everyone longs to give themselves to someone . . . to have a deep, soul relationship with another . . . to be loved thoroughly and exclusively. But to the Christian, God says, "No, not yet, not until you are satisfied and fulfilled and content with being loved by Me alone, with giving yourself totally and unreserved to Me . . . to have an intensely personal and unique relationship with Me alone . . . I love you, my child, and until you discover that only in Me is your satisfaction to be found, you will not be capable of the perfect human relationship that I have planned for you. You will not be united with another until you are united with Me exclusively. I want you to stop wishing, stop planning, and allow Me to give you the most thrilling plan existing . . . one that you can't imagine.

I want you to have the best. Please allow Me to bring it to you ... you just keep watching Me, expecting the greatest things. Keep expecting that satisfaction knowing that I AM. Don't be anxious. Don't worry. Don't look around at the things others have that I have given them. You just keep looking off and up to Me, or you'll miss what I have to show you.

And when you are ready, I'll surprise you with a love more exciting and wonderful than any you would have ever dreamed of. You see . . . until you are ready, and the one for you is ready . . . I am working this minute to have both of you ready at the same time. Until you are both satisfied exclusively with Me and the life that I have prepared for the both of you, you won't be able to experience the love that exemplifies your relationship with Me and thus is perfect love. And, dear child, I want to see in flesh a picture of your relationship with Me, and to enjoy materially and concretely the everlasting union of beauty and perfection and love that I offer you with Myself."

Lovingly yours, Your Heavenly Father

The chase went on

At Ollies Follies, classes fight to win

O llies Follies, what a way to celebrate the first weekend of the school year. Early Saturday morning, students rolled out of bed, grabbed their nikes, and adorned themselves in their class colors. The Olivet women quickly stuck their hair in ponytails and headed toward the outdoor volleyball court, while the men grabbed their mouthpieces and cleats and sprinted to the football field, ready to play.

The classes battled it out until the Junior ladies emerged as the volleyball champs over the second place Senior team. The men's football contest ended up in a more traditional order with the Seniors taking the top spot and the Juniors following respectively.

The afternoon's activities began with a colorful balloon launch followed by the pyramid build, shopping cart race, tug of war, and softball bat relay.

After this, the athletes and fans headed for the showers, a little rest before supper and finally to the skit and talent show that evening.

Everyone lined up early for the night's competition. They waited patiently in Ludwig, as they amused themselves by playing sophisticated college games like duck, duck, goose The crowds then watched rover. as the Juniors secured first place in the skit competition and the Freshmen stole the judges' hearts with a song by a men's trio. These victories catapulted these two classes into unheard of finishes in the overall competition. Tradition was shattered as the Juniors barely edged the Seniors for first place and the Freshmen jumped to secure a final place victory over the Sophomores.

The night ended as people lingered, laughed, and celebrated. New friendships were made, class spirit renewed, and memories of balloons, sunshine, music, mud, and fun linger in the photos on this page and, hopefully, in the hearts and minds of the hundreds who participated. J. Williamson Q

Frightful fun

Students take the haunt out of Halloween

Celebrating Halloween had always en a long standing tradition on cams. Dorm trick-or-treating, going to icago in costumes, silly little pranks, if an occasional peck on the cheek re all common practices on Halloen weekend.

The atmosphere during this time was in different ways. Many dorm floors deavored to make theirs the scarlest by setting up tombstones for a graveyard scene. Music was used for the setting of a haunted house sensation. Walking down long corridors with the lights dimmed and rubber spiders and bats hanging from the ceiling were what girls experienced on Chapman fourth floor. The Hills boys got a kick out of watching the girls walk in confusion from bright blinding strobe lights. And the tradition of the guys trick-or-treating in the girls dorms first was never forgotten, "The candy always looked so familiar."

Along with this "frightful fun" the students realized and respected the school's stand and always dressed in moderate costumes and kept the Christian values in mind. (2) (Z. Burdine)

"He came as a babe"

The 1985 Christmas Banquet ~ students gather in celebration

October began with planning for Olivet's annual all-school Christmas Banquet. In November, all ideas were down on paper and ready for construction. Too quickly, the middle of November was upon each member and this meant starting construction on the little things. The first part of December, creativity was bounding from all and the basics of the Banquet was underway. Stained glass, nativity scenes, tablesettings, and the picture background were all worked on by the council members.

Jo Williamson, Vice-President of Social Affairs, appointed four people to the job of organizing a certain part of the banquet and bringing everything together. One week before the banquet several all-nighters were pulled by council members and those who were willing to help out. Friday, December 13th, the night before the big event, the whole committee was together for twelve straight hours. After working, talking, and laughing together for so much time, the committee felt like a family.

How time flew. Saturday afternoon last minute things were completed and Ludwig looked great. The council toured the place to make sure everything was in place. A sigh of relief and happiness was heard from each person beholding the beautiful thought and sight of the season.

Everything went well and the program topped off the evening with a glow. Then came the difficult part of taking all the decorations down. All the work and planning was done. Even so, each council member felt proud to have been part of such meaningful and fond memories. B. Parker ①

The Quad Squad

Students find a place for fun and friendship

Every campus has one. Every student knows of it. Everyone has hung out there at least once. What is it? It's the place where the action is, the center of activity. For other colleges it might be a hill, stream, or grove, but at Olivet it is known to all as the Decker Quadrangle. It stands in the center of Olivet's campus and was built especially for the students. It is a the place for fun and unity which can be seen all year long.

As the school year began, the quad saw new friendships being made as students met and conversed on the concrete benches. When the weather cooled and autumn came, the outdoor fireplace was put to good use.

Bonfires glowed through the night's darkness and students' voices were heard singing the old familiar camp songs, while they roasted marshmallows and hotdogs. The night before a big football game, the quad served as a place for school-wide spirit, as students gathered to cheer during pep rallies. As the autumn season passed and the last leaves fell, the quad awaited winter and the new happenings it would bring.

The campus soon became covered in white as students started a new semester. On early chilled days, girls dreaded crossing the quad alone because they feared that the minute their shoes touched the icy surface, an embarrassing fall would follow. Not everyone shared this same fear though. Professor Wiese and some male students couldn't wait patiently enough for days like this when they could get a running start and try to slide from Benner library to Ludwig Center. During crisp nights after a big snowfall, the quad became a major battlefield and freshmen experienced their first "real" snowball fight. Students dressed in their heaviest ski jackets and furriest mittens ran in groups from their dorms to join in the excitement.

The snow soon melted and spring came around the corner. Puddles along the brick surface served as the only reminder of the glistening snow students had seen for the past three months. As the weather warmed, the flowers and trees were seen once again in their fullness. After the lunch and dinner hours, students enjoyed the change of weather while licking their SAGA ice cream cones. Couples were noticed sitting on the benches and grass in quiet conversation and students were once again enjoying the quad which had been with them throughout the changing (K. Dexter)

A campus tradition

hristmas on campus has always been a special time and this year was no different. Decorations were beautiful, spirits were lifted, and everyone joined in celebrating the traditional holiday.

Pine trees were brought on campus and stood decorated on the grounds and in the buildings. Lights, wreaths and bows were hung for everyone to see and enjoy. Students also decorated their dorm rooms with a seasonal flair. Doors were covered with red and green wrapping paper topped with ribbon. Christmas music flooded the halls.

Mailboxes were filled with greeting cards wishing all a happy season. Some students decorated minature trees in their rooms and hung stockings from the mirrors. Almost everyone strung glowing lights in their windows for those who passed by to admire. Fourth floor Nesbitt even went so far as to combine their decorating efforts and through each room on the quad-side of the building, forming their lights into a different letter, spelled out "Happy Holidays."

The ways which students chose to celebrate Christmas on campus were all different yet special in their own way. For Freshmen it meant a first chance to decorate their own individual tree. For Seniors it was the last opportunity to see the quad lights reflecting off the snow-covered ground, and for us all it meant establishing our own traditions and memories which will effect our lives in the seasons to come. *K. #### Where the Spirit of the Lord is

On campus there was as certain spirit wandering about. It found its home in the dorms, Kelley Prayer Chapel, College Church, Chalfant Auditorium, and many of our hearts. To some, this spirit was their closest friend. To others, it was only a mere acquaintance, but needless to say, it reached each person and made itself known.

This spirit has never been a stranger to any of us. It grew up with most of us in our homes and home churches and when we left for school, it naturally came along too. Many seniors claimed that while they've felt it in previous years, it seemed even stronger this year. Not one of us could help but be aware of its overwhelming presence on campus. We were able to see it in others, especially when testimonies were given at Prayer Band and Wednesday night Prayer Meetings. It was also seen at floor devotions in the dorms and chapel services. Our professors often displayed that it lived in them, when they began classes with Reminders of its presence weren't just seen in people, but also in simple objects. One couldn't help but notice it when they watched clouds drift overhead, saw a rose bud in the process of blooming, or felt the sun beaming on their faces while walking to classes. Everything on campus served as a constant reminder of the special spirit we shared and worshipped.

Only one word could possibly summarize what exactly this spirit was ... love. It was the love our Father had for us, the love we shared for Him, and the love we felt towards one another.

Students making the Red Room scene

There is a very interesting room on our campus. It's a place filled with games, fun, food, conversation, and company. No, it's not on Hills 4th floor or Williams or McClain, because it is not your typical college room. Instead, it is located in the lower level of Ludwig Center and is better known as the Red Room.

The Red Room was always a gathering spot for students brimming with energy and mischief, looking for an opportunity to release it. It also served as a great place for coming with friends and discussing the day's happenings. A few students tried to study in the booths, but soon found friends joining them and usually ended up tossing the books aside. The Red Room was mostly filled with hungry students who caught a case of the late-nite munchies. Who hasn't suffered from a "grinder attack" while trying to study in the dorms? Some came to play the numerous table games always in progress. Chess, trivial pursuit, uno, and skip-bo were just a few of the popular ones.

New to the campus this year were the Red Room nights. Sponsored by the Social Committee, students watched as the lights were turned down and old Groucho Marx films were brought out, along with pizza, pop, and plenty of laughter.

Whatever the reason for coming to the Red Room though, the reasons for leaving were always the same — it closes at midnight. (K. Dexter)

A cut above the rest

A closer look at the people students encounter every day

Every day in our hustled and hurried lives, we as students came in contact with some very special individuals. Most often we didn't notice them and rarely stopped to smile and say "hi." Their jobs on campus are similar — to serve the college and its students. While they have performed their duties both efficiently and happily, they never received the recognition they deserved. These are the behind the scenes people of our college.

They were the people who delivered our mail and cheerfully handed us our packages. When paying for our bookstore purchases, they always reminded us to "have a nice day." They typed our tests and scheduled desperately needed appointments with our professors. They cleaned the snow off the sidewalks in the winter and leaves off the grass in the fall. They cleaned the dorm after floor-wide shaving cream fights and helped us start our cars after we accidently left the lights on all night.

Think for a moment. What would we have done without them? Their services are greatly needed and the campus would definitely be affected. While we don't see them as professors, R.D.'s, or administration, we still need to frequently look them face-

A second job

Students find ways, on and off campus, to pay the bills

As any student knows, the typical college life usually consisted of long days, late nights, and occasional weekends spent in the library, making school a full-time job. For many Olivet students though, the busy lifestyle did not stop there. With the rising tuition rates and pressing need for money, students were forced to take on the added responsibility of a second job. Whether it was on or off campus, the results were the same. It became even harder to find the hours to study, and many social activities were missed due to the prior responsibility.

Some students found jobs in the community. For those with waitressing talent, tips from Bradley's Garden and Chicago Dough provided some spare change. Jobs at the YMCA were good choices for students with athletic ability. Other popular off-campus jobs included babysitting, fastfood positions at Hardee's and Arby's, cashiers at K-Mart and Alco, and housecleaning for neighborhood families.

For the student lacking transportation there were always oncampus jobs available. Groundswork, maintenance, SAGA, Ludwig hosts and hostesses, tutoring, departmental and lab assistantships, and R.A. positions were just a few. Due to the Work-Study program, more on-campus jobs had been provided for those students who qualified.

Whatever second job students took on, the sacrifice of time and a social life was still involved and greatly missed!

Those aches, those pains

Colds, flu and other bugs hit campus during the year

Cindy Miller, a graduate of Olivet, was employed as the school nurse. Her duties included skillfully caring for students and also offering advice on healthcare matters.

Cindy's roles outside of her nursing role include those of a wife, mother, and choir member of Kankakee First Church. Cindy's health-conscious attitude stretched beyond her Health Office desk and into the role of aerobics instructor. She instructs aerobics three times a week in Wisner Hall. Her classes were opened to any student interested in improving their overall physical well-being. The time Cindy took to design and instruct these classes has been much appreciated by all who attended, that is, after the sore muscles went away.

Although Cindy's role of health care facilitator was often times taken for granted, those who utilized her services are appreciative of her profesional attitude and skills.

Of house and home

For many students, it is more than just a dorm — it's home

Life in the dorm was always an interesting experience, during the day and night.

The dorms in the middle of the day were pretty quiet, with students studying or napping. But one might have heard a stereo, the hum of the vacuum cleaner pushed by the dorm housekeeper, or those words yelled by a deep voice which echoed throughout the hall, "Man on the floor!"

Recall the popular Wednesday morning room check. It was either getting up early that morning to clean or sleep in and scramble through the room picking up clothes, books, etc. and stuff them in the closet. But then there was the option of leaving things just the way they were. That was when the R.A.'s loved to mark the room check slips as messy. When the messys accumulated, so did the fines.

Late nights led to prank times on those who were fortunate enough to have gone to bed early. Stacking pop cans in front of their door or taping brown paper across it so that in the morning, they had to break out, was always fun.

The aroma of hot buttered popcorn filled the halls nightly. You walked up and down the halls, endlessly trying to sniff out who had made it, preparing to make a surprise raid.

Weekly floor devotions was also an individual dorm activity. Those thirty minute devotions brought by the floor chaplain or special speakers were a needed break from the tedious happenings of the day. The inspiration and inner uplift was captured from those moments spent with friends sharing their touch with the Lord. Without the Lord's help and without personal and floor devotions, things may have become too difficult to handle, even living the everyday, routines of dorm life.

Tension prevention

Ways to release ANXIETY

typing a twenty-page term paper

Tension, that aggravating strain of stress that wells up inside of you when pressures and problems arise. In our society, it is on the uprise, along with the problems that accompany it. As college students we have felt more than our share of tension throughout the academic year. The most common stressful times for students have been at 3:00 in the morning, while due at a 7:30 a.m. class, when cramming information five minutes before class for that test you forgot about, and of course, during final exam week. We have all experienced it and in our own way, have found methods that helped to release it.

For students, the gym became a great place for burning off unwanted anxiety. Whether it was weightlifting, running, swimming, or participating in intramural sports, it always helped students to forget about their pressures for a few hours. Other popular ways used by students included relaxing in the Red Room, taking a study break in the Quad to converse with friends, spending a few hours in the T.V. room, and listening to peaceful music alone in the dorm. Without these helpful methods, the school life would have been unbearable if not impossible.

By discovering tension prevention habits at an early age, students have started a healthy practice which will be a benefit to them in the future years. (K. Dexter)

Just like . . . Grandma's?

Saga food service gets many mixed reviews

What is Saga? To us it is simply the company that provides our meals daily, but in reality it is a leading consumer service company with operations in more than 1,350 locations throughout the United States and Canada.

Our Saga Food Service is run by Director Mrs. Judy Coomer and Manager Mr. Todd Vicker. Together they've worked to serve the students as efficiently as possible.

One major event which helped serve us better, was the installation of a new Hobart dish machine which cleaned and dried our dishes more thoroughly. Coke dispensers were also added along with two Panasonic microwaves. All were welcome additions to our cafeteria.

Saga also tried to break up the monotony and repetition of meals by adding Trendsetters and Pacechangers to the menu. A Trendsetter is an ethnic variation of a particular dish. These exposed the students to food they had never tried before. They included: breakfast burrito, egg drop soup, orange baked chicken, and specialty burgers. Pacechangers were a special event which was sometimes centered around a particicular school activity. They included: baked potato, cookie, hotdog, cheesecake, sundae, and chili bars. We all enjoyed these items and the change they offered.

The experiences that I have gained while working at SAGA for the past few years are numerous. The friendships and good times spent with the company will be memories I will treasure. •

Games students play Played in simple fun or serious competition

Played in simple fun or serious competition campus games provide enjoyment

Gobble, gobble, gobble, grump! Uno, science question please, pingpong, check mate. When walking through the lower level of Ludwig Center, these familiar sounds were often heard. As students, we loved our games which gave us a break from studying. They always succeeded in giving us a few fun-filled hours. Games also gave us an opportunity to meet others in an informal setting. Remember how you asked that stranger walking by to be your Rook partner so you could join in the game?

Through the year, we saw games spring to popularity and die down, much to our surprise. Video games were always a quarter gobbler.

Golf, track and field, and frogger could be seen with anxious competitors near by, waiting for their chance to beat the high score. The old favorite, ping-pong, was also frequently played. Round robin tournaments were continuously going on over the weekends. Rook, backgammon, Uno, Trivial Pursuit, and Skip-Bo were also frequent choices.

No matter what games students played, they always brought fun, friends, and fellowship one step closer. (K. Dexter)

Off the hook

Phone bills and burdens Was it worth it?

Dana Preusch negotiates a contract for the Glimmerglass. She served as business manager for the paper. Photo by J. Springer $\mathbf{A}\mathbf{s}$  students began the school year, an option they faced was whether or not they wanted to have, or could afford, the responsibilities of one of the conveniences of home, the grand ol' telephone. It may be a convenience, but when the Illinois Bell bills arrived in our mailboxes we often hesitated and were reluctant to open up that envelope, realizing how much more we were in debt. For some, it meant another long-distance call home to ask their parents to send money. Ninety-five percent of the students had phones this year. Those who did not often found it frustrating not having the convenience of their own phones available when important messages were relayed.

Those with enormous bills all promised themselves, "I'll do better this month. I won't talk as long next time or call as often." Did it work?

Not all calls though were costly. Campus calling was free and often good for a laugh, meeting someone new, or talking to that one you had your eye on but couldn't seem to find the guts to speak to personally. Anonymous calling always did the trick if you could get them wondering who you were. Within the months you were here, you've probably been the victim of an anonymous caller or maybe were the caller yourself.

Recall those times, running down the hall, bursting into your room to answer the ringing phone, only to pick it up saying hello and hearing only a dial tone. Missed it again! Late night conversations till 1 or 2 a.m. were all too common for many, or working on homework over the lines until it was finished. What would we have done without our phones?! (P. DeVidal)

A song of another tune

Orpheus members show that their talents extend past being a choir member

The Orpheus Variety Show has always been a major entertaining event on our campus and this year's show was no different. It consisted of an assortment of songs, skits and fun.

Some highlights of the evening were a duet by brother/sister team Randy and Pam Gooden, solos by seniors Scott Apple and Lori Lynn, and the familiar "Who's on first" baseball skit by Burt Webb and Jeff Meyers. The choir, led by Dr. George Dunbar, put the proceeds from the show and their fundraisers towards the California trip they took in the spring. (K. Dexter)

Songs of celebration

The fiftieth year of Handel's finest

n December 7th and 8th, the Fiftieth Annual Performances of Handel's "Messiah" were presented on the campus of Olivet Nazarene College. The first performance in Chalfant Auditorium was commemorated by having Olivet Alumni as the guest soloists. The soloists were Marla (Kensey) Stanton, Shirley Close who is pursuing an opera career in New York, Jonathan Welch who is also pursuing opera, and Gary Moore, presently teaching at Mid-America Nazarene College. Sunday's College Church performance featured selected student soloists, all of whom had to audition for each area. The soloists were Kay (Buker) Webb, Bonnie Kingston, Joann Lichte, Cynthia Larson, John Lynn, John Brewer, Scott Apple, and Brad Garvin.

Saturday's chorus also featured a choir of over two-hundred people consisting of the Treble Clef, Viking, Choral Union, and Orpheus choirs, community volunteers, and alumni. Sunday's chorus consisted of the College choirs.

"Messiah" was jointly conducted by every person ever to direct the oratorio, except for the late Dr. Walter B. Larsen. Professor Joe Noble, Dr. D. George Dunbar, and Dr. Harlow Hopkins shared the major conducting and duties with special guest conductor Mrs. Naomi Larsen conducting the Hallelujah Chorus.

The Fiftieth Annual Performances were the musical highlight of the year at ONC. With such a fine troupe of soloists, choruses and directors, one would be hard pressed to present a finer production at any college, anywhere. It was a fine weekend of Handel's "Messiah." B. Garvin Q

Giving of yourself

Students and professors practice compassion

Compassion — to feel with, not to feel for. Compassion is the inward feeling that moves us to action. With these ideas, Compassionate Ministries, a group of concerned students, was able to be moved to action for Jesus by participating in many areas of ministry this past year.

Early in the year, the hunger awareness group HANDS cosponsored with area churches, the first Kankakee County Walk for Hunger which raised about $12,000 for Kankakee and world hunger. Compassionate Ministries and other Olivet students actively participated in this event. Compassionate Ministries also sent student work-and-witness teams to area churches to help repair and construct churches. Other students were involved heavily in inner-city ministry, like the group Sonrise which sent students to Blue Island and Northside Nazarene churches in Chicago to help with their Sunday services. Compassionate Ministries also sent a work-andwitness team to Haiti this summer. Many other students participated in Christian businesses and the food scavenger hunts.

During the year, it was a privilege to be director of these students who gave of themselves to show with their hands the love of Jesus. They realized that it is a biblical mandate to evangelize with our lives and hands and not only with our mouths. May God always give us the feeling of inward compassion, like he did this year, so that we can do nothing except be moved to action. (2)

Roommates make it more than just a temporary living arrangement

Living in a dorm, students had the perfect opportunity to meet interesting people, make many new friends, and maybe even find a relative they never realized they had.

The pleasures of a roommate were something beyond compare. They were a brother or sister, best friend, companion, and parent all wrapped up in one. When problems arose or burdens became too heavy, it was comforting knowing there was someone nearby and willing to listen no matter how late at night or hectic their schedule. Popcorn parties, water fights in the bathroom, cramming sessions, clothing exchanges, double dates, food runs, and nightly devotions were just a few of the memorable activities shared.

A roommate became someone who sometimes knew you even better than you knew yourself. They daily saw your good and not so good sides and somehow learned how to live with you anyway. Spending anywhere from one to four years of your life with them, they became simply a part of you. You not only lived together, but grew up together. As a roommate, they shared in one of the most important times of your life and because of this, they will always be the relative you never knew you had. 🕐 (K. Dexter)

Fun in the Sun

Florida Olivet style

The atmosphere set was remarkable. In the middle of the floor a volleyball net was set-up for those who loved the beach game tradition. And in one corner was a sandbox, for those like Chuck Taylor, who longed to make sand castles like in their younger years. Then a new beach trend, hacky-sack, had another group of students' participation. The big round colorful beachball was the center of attention that night, used for volleyball, and other beach events. Unfortunately, Ron Brodien "busted" it's glory, and the attention was turned to the "limbo." There's no chance of doing the limbo in the sand without thinking of a warm summer day on the white sandy beach.

The "fun in the sun" beach party was a spectacular event, and there's nothing like warming our souls on a cold winter night, with a little "Fun in the Sun." (Z. Burdine) ①

When the books are closed

College life consists of more than just academics

Sitting through classes from 7:30 am to 3:00 pm, studying all week; it sometimes became trying. The monotony of our daily academic schedules often caused us to do crazy and sometimes bizarre things after the classes were over.

Whatever the event or activity, no matter how foolish and zany, it always showed the fun we had and that college life was more than just Comp 101, Greek, exams, term papers, spot quizzes, daily assignments, and G.P.A.'s. College life was also those memorable, spontaneous endeavors pursued after the books were closed. Q. (K. Dexter)

A time for panic

Learning to deal with college crises

Panic, a frantic or sudden fright which leads to general alarm. As college students, we all experienced it, usually more often than we care to remember. In the hectic college life where every second counted, it was difficult to remain calm when unexpected crises arose.

Typing till five in the morning trying to finish the paper you forgot about, cramming information every available second for the test you waited much too long to begin studying for, and running through the quad trying to make it to that 7:30 a.m. class when you woke up at 7:27 a.m. Whatever the situation, it became easy to panic and even more difficult to keep your cool. It was during these times that we learned to lean on each other, along with the Lord, to help us make it through. It was because of these trials though that we grew stronger spiritually and found the true meaning of the word "trust." (K. Dexter)

"Let's Make a Deal"

Olivet's own version of the popular game-show

The Senior class brought a new means of entertainment to the campus this past year. Students dressed in unusual attire and behaved foolishly in order to win big prizes at "Let's make a Deal." It was amazing to see the collection of characters that showed up. We saw everything, including a carpet remnant, a housewife, a Hershey's kiss, and a fireman. Monty Hall (Rod Thill) made deals and gave away prizes. Some terrific ones like Little Caesar's pizza's, money and gift certificates from various area merchants, and some not-so-great items such as Salvation Army clothes, coconuts, and a date with an Olivet guy. Wes Sampson, who impersonated a professor, won the grand prize which included sixty free minutes at a tanning salon, dinner for two at the Holiday Inn, and a new leather briefcase. It was a tremendous way to spend a Friday night and to get our minds off classes. C. Stimson §

Chilly reflections

The feeling of winter won't be forgotten

K nee-high drifts, twenty degree weather, snowball fights, sliding through the quad on your way to class, wet flakes resting on your eyelashes — these are all things which reflect in our mind when we think about the winter season. We dreaded getting out of bed in the morning. The thought of leaving our nice, warm beds for the freezing draft that crept through our windows and froze our rooms, was enough to make you stay in bed and get another absence in New Testament. Snow plows, busy clearing the sidewalks at 5 in the morning, often were heard as the roar of their engines woke us from our sleep. Wool coats and scarfs, fuzzy earmuffs, leather gloves, and rubber-soled boots were a necessity, along with heavy quilts, fluffy slippers, and plenty of hot chocolate mix. While we all found the days from December to February endlessly long and cold, it was a different story for fellow students from California, Texas, and Puerto Rico. They anxiously waited to experience their first snowfall and after living in it for three months, wondered why they did.

Even though we often complained about the wind, ice, and snow, we soon got use to it and after a while regarded it as constant companions which went with us wherever we went. K. Dexter

Alternatives to cafeteria dining

"Yes, I'll take a bacon cheeseburger, a small fry and a medium Pepsi."

Hardee's was just one of the food places students ate, besides the cafeteria. These second choices often became first choices as the students sought food changes.

Denny's was the place for those late nights. Little Caesars and Domino's had pizza, while Hardee's and McDonald's completed for those who had cravings for hamburgers and fries.

When it came to dessert, two new places had hung out their sign. Donutland was popular as an all night shop that was close to campus and had great donuts. TCBY's (The country's best yogurt) was also a new shop in Meadowview that had various types of yogurt combinations available.

Since most students lived on a limited budget, eating out wasn't a regular habit, but on those special occasions when the mood hit, it was nice to get off campus and have some — well...should we eat pizza, hamburgers or ... Maybe the hardest decision was deciding where to go. (N. Aylor) ©

The superbowl spirit shuffles thru campus

S uper bowl Sunday. How can any of us forget that blessed event? The memories of the Fridge when his three hundred plus pounds ran the old pigskin in for a T.D. Then Richard Dent was voted M.V.P. They will remain with us for quite some time.

But the game isn't all we've remembered. We look back and see the crowded T.V. lounges, parties in various rooms and many students (yes, even the ladies) dressed in blue and orange or like their favorite player. We remember SAGA having an all-time low at dinner. Since no one wanted to miss any of the game by dining in the cafeteria, Domino's Pizza made an outrageous amount of deliveries to the campus.

Parties were held by many to show their enthusiasm for the game. People called a local radio station every time the Bears scored in hopes of being the fifth caller and winning five hundred dollars.

In Chicago, massive celebrations broke out as the Bears overwhelmingly took the victory. Chicago will never be the same. And for that matter, neither will the campus of Olivet, for a while at least. (C. Stimson)

Together again

Vikings and Treble Clef double the fun

hat's Show Biz" was definitely exactly that — Show Biz! The costumes, the scenery, the make-up, the lights, all blended together to make the Treble Clef/Vikings Variety Show a huge success. The evening went from contemporary gospel music to some handy-dandy tips from Roseanne Roseannadanna.

There was a special appearance from that smiling, multi-talented duo, your idols and mine, Donny and Marie Osmond. And yes, she was a little bit country, and he was a little bit rock-and-roll, but they were both all teeth!

If you ever wanted to know about Olivet lovin', this told all, from the first meeting at the ice cream machine to the tear-jerking outcome of him dating her best friend.

And who could forget that lovable green hunk, Kermit the frog. After his shakey start when he had a human in his throat, he charmed the audience with his amazing singing.

If you missed this show you really missed a lot but not quite as much as Eunice, Moma, and Ed. They lost their camera, their chance for fame, and almost their composure on their free trip to New York.

So if you passed up your chance at a great evening, don't fret. There's always next year! And in the exact words of Roseanne Roseannadanna, "Hey! Flicka that sweat ball off a your nose!" (A. Jordon)

A change for the better

Improvements happening around campus

I mprovements. Freshmen did not appreciate them as much as the seniors did because they had never known Olivet life without them. There were many improvements made at Olivet over the summer and during the year.

One was the carpeting and fixing up of third floor Burke. No more are students disturbed when the clickity-clack of a person's heels are heard resounding down the hall.

Another was the addition of the warming house and ice ring. Although the sporadic warm weather throughout January made the ice slushy at times, this rink was an improvement that will be utilized by students in the years to come.

Saga had some new items, including microwaves and cereal at all meals, which the students appreciated and made good use of. Saga also had a new dishwasher that made it easier for those in the kitchen.

Other improvements were: the sound system in chapel, the furniture in Hills lounge, Nesbitt Hall doors, the new chapel organ, lights in Williams Hall bathrooms, and offices in the upstairs of Ludwig. Watch carefully — or improvements will pop up without students even noticing them. (N. Aylor)

Mr. New York — Brad Garvin

The Nifty-Nine

It takes more than just a pretty face to be Mr. ONC

W hat a night! An exciting, funfilled evening was enjoyed by the audience and contestants of the fifth annual "Mr. ONC Contest." From the Grand entrance of Mr. New York, Brad Garvin, to the embarrassment of Mr. Florida, Ron Brodien, the laughter that filled Kresge Auditorium never ceased.

The contest began with the introduction of the "Nifty-Nine" States, by the hostess, Dawn Bumstead. And ended with the introduction of 1986's Mr. ONC, Steve Davis, Mr. Missouri.

The talent shown was undoubtedly the best it has been. There were serious moments, as well as hysterically humorous ones. Some highlights were Mr. Texas and Mr. California's juggling act, the Olivet Shuffle, Dennis Metcalf's sound effects brought about through blowing in his arm, Mr. Missouri's sudden personality change displayed through a video, the acting ability of Scott Chamberlain, the magical Mr. Florida, singing ability of Mr. Kansas although he should have sung "Somewhere over the Rainbow," Oh, Yes, and "story time" with Mr. Washington D.C., John Bosca.

Hard work went into the contest by WRA and the contestants, and it did pay off. The night was a success. Each time we drive into one of the Nifty-Nine States, we'll think back and remember the 1986 Mr. ONC contest. (Z. Burdine) ©

A variety of talents

Talent. A special, natural ability or aptitude. A capacity for achievement of success. It was just one of the things displayed at the Valentines Star Search Show sponsored by the junior class. Participants showed their talent in three different categories: lip sync, comedy and singing. Rob North and Scott Chamberlain served as hosts for the evening and announced the contestants.

The Show took off to a great start with the lip sync competition. We heard everything from White Heart's "Vital Signs" to Kool and the Gangs' "Emergency." At times during the performances, we found ourselves having to glance twice to make sure that they really were just acting and not actually performing the number themselves.

We left the lip sync portion with our toes tapping and went on to the comedy competition. Here we saw skits, heard cute tunes, watched students "ham-ing" it up on stage and heard more laughter from the audience than we dreamed possible.

After gaining back our composure, we left the comedy competition and entered into the singing section. The talent we witnessed here was just as entertaining. Songs ranged from funny to sentimental, from "Ebony and Ivory" to "That's What Friends Are For."

The night also included a mystery guest which surprised us even more than the previous talent we had heard. We were left on the edges of our Kresge chairs as Mrs. Lora Lee Parrott was escorted on-stage and graced us with a beautiful number on the piano. While it was startling to those of us who didn't know she played, it was especially astonishing to Mrs. Parrott as she finished and received a standing ovation.

As you can see, The Valentine's Star Search Show was definitely more than just your ordinary variety show. Instead, it was a revealing of Stars that were on our campus, just waiting for a chance to shine. (K. Dexter)

A look at the everyday life of a student

hat is a typical Olivet student?" This question could be approached in a number of ways, the most common of which would be the contrast of an Olivetian to a more general role, that of the "typical college student."

To prevent belaboring such a contrast, focus instead on a model — Ollie, the ideal Olivetian — and observe what a day in the life of a typical Olivet student was like.

Ollie awoke and sprung out of bed at six o'clock sharp, as his radio-clock alarm softly played WKOC. He knew it was bad to procrastinate, so he scheduled 7:30 classes every day, and left 8:30 open on Tuesdays and Thursdays so he could eat breakfast twice a week.

He raised his hand often, answering every question offered him with a little twist of theology (even though he was in Business Law), and smiled constantly enough to nauseate those atypical Olivetians around him who scheduled class at this time of morning only because the other times were filled up. These deviants required sleep to exist, and were not yet awake.

Ollie followed his class load (of 23 hours) through until 3:00 p.m. Say it was Tuesday, so that included chapel, which Ollie only missed once. He was a second semester junior.

At 4:45 he ate a bounteous meal which he not only gave thanks for, but complimented aloud before many atypical students at his table.

5:30. Ollie had a committee meeting. He was ecstatic at serving on such an organizational body, which was responsible for so much activity and policy control on campus. He was the elected assistant to the treasurer of the ski club, and possessed as much clout as any of the student positions he knew of.

Evening approached, and he wrote a lovely letter home, one to his favorite professor, and one to drop in a suggestion box on some important issue on campus (like cleaning the build-up out of the plaques circling the quad; Ollie was very concerned with the appearance of the school). He was always sure to put his letters on ONC stationery.

After devotions, Ollie studied until one a.m. and tucked himself in, glowing with the anticipation of tomorrow's four tests.

Good night, Ollie. (S. K. Robisch) 🖁

ONC ~ What a feeling!

The pride shows through

Pride — "a reasonable or justifiable respect, the act of being proud." At Olivet, the word "pride" is no stranger. It showed on students and staff members faces as they cheered on teams at athletic events. It could be heard in their tone of voice when they discussed with an outsider about what Olivet is really like. It even became obvious in the way they dressed. Sweatshirts, hats, jerseys, and other items bearing the Olivet title were hot items, rarely on the bookstore racks for very long. A walk through the dorms, library, red room, gym, or wherever else students decided to hang out during the evening hours, proved this to be true.

Somehow though, our school spirit extended beyond that of clothing and other purple and gold attire. The natural cheer and enthusiasm our school so readily displayed at every available opportunity was evidence that students enjoyed Olivet and the togetherness it brought between themselves and their fellow classmates. "Reading, writing and arithmetic." Well, it was a bit more complex than that. The general idea said — college teaches beyond the basics. Unlike prep schools — college is a place where we could be noticed for what we did.

Casting aside extra-curricular activities — the most important goal of any institution of higher education is to EDUCATE. Each student had the opportunity to decide how extensive or inextensive their education would be. There were two kinds of students — those who learn and those who did not learn quite as much.

The first student was one who planned his academic schedule according to what classes would best educate him or her. A student with a genuine desire to learn . . .

On the other hand, not everyone viewed college life as an opportunity for education. For many, Olivet provided a chance to get away from home, to "over develop" social skills, and to see how little effort could be spent and still receive a degree. Surrounded by 1,500 peers and with Chicago only an hour away some unfortunate parents paid for an expensive four-year vacation.

An "education" was the act of acquiring general knowledge and developing the powers of reasoning and judgement, characterized by displaying qualities of culture and learning.

Our education was special — it had a "Christian purpose" which ties the learners and non-learners in the strongest bond possible. Students here fall into all levels of intelligence, and from every socio-economic group. All students strive academically and their purpose — to be noticed...

THEY HAD TO NOTICE

ON THE AIR

Broadcast majors are not what you'd think. You recognize them by voice, not by face. They're different from other people, because, to them, sound is everything. Broadcasters are made up of:

Practice — To excel, they know they have to invest a lot of time in the sound booth, to sharpen their voices. Tape recorders, microphones, and cart machines all take the heat and sweat of broadcast practice.

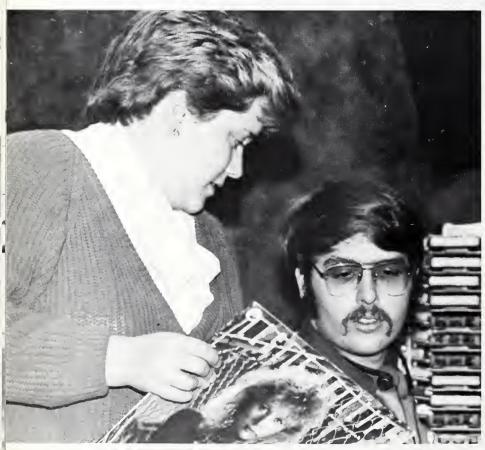

Patience — Since Murphy's law operates in a normal broadcast day, the radio staffer needs tact and patience to endure problems. This perseverance is easily acquired after a few months of radio exposure.

Two ears and a mouth — This is no surprise, but for the broadcast major, the relationship between the two must be learned. Entry level broadcast students discover quickly that to please their audience, the quality of what they say is more important than how much they say.

Dreams — This is the most enjoyable part of the whole experience. Once a broadcaster knows what he can do, dreams begin to form like raindrops ir his mind. It's more than a fleeting glance at the future; it's a fixation toward new frontiers Broadcast majors harbor these aspirations, and they practice persist, and press to realize thei dreams in the world of broad casting. ## GETTING NOTICED...

The ONC question of the year has to be, "Are you studying in the library tonight?" The answer: "Yeah, I've got a lot to do." "We're meeting in the fishbowl to work on a Calc assignment." "I'll be on the third floor — that's where the football players study."

Obviously people don't go to the library exclusively to study. We all take our books along, but carrying books is essentially for guilt-reduction. If I take my books, I can at least tell myself that I planned on studying.

A basic paradox exists at ONC: Why are most conversations carried on in the library?

Do we go to the library to study because it is quiet there? Sometimes. Do we need a book on reserve? Often. Do we want to socialize? Always. The library is a good plce to get noticed ... in quiet ways. (L. Roat)

"So what is a professor?" A person.
"What, like a people pleaser?" No, a person. A person who professes. "A molder of minds, a shaper of thoughts?" Try opinionated. "What?" Facts can carry a lecture only so far.

"And the rest?" Bias. "I don't understa--" Responses. They tell us numbers and dates and names and places, sure, but how they present the facts is how they have responded to them. Any shaping of a student's mind is done when that student reacts to the professor. "But doesn't a prof have a responsibility ..." To be honest. "With whom?" Himself, his reactions; the rest will follow. "Can't we expect them to prepare us for

ART

Strokes flow from the brush of Kip Robisch as he works on his latest masterpiece

Easels, paint, brushes, and multicolored smocks are objects embedded in the mind when one thinks of art.

Beautiful scenes, portraits, cities, bridges, and historical sights are the most common genres noticed as art.

There are some things categorized in the doctrine that art is its own excuse for being "Art For Art's Sake."

When one develops a concept of art it usually contains visions of beautiful paintings, and sculpture. Ceramics, graphics and crafts are often minimized, or left unnoticed.

The abstract painting is perhaps the least understood of all art, and certainly it is the least appreciated. Most people expect to see someone or something in paintings. They do not imagine that the beautiful array of colors could actually be something. "They see it as color for color's sake," said Dr. Harvey Collins.

Larsen Fine Arts Center houses an unusual specimen. Standing in the office of Professor Thompson is his greatest and most recognized piece of art. It is a three-dimensional waterfall, utilizing such materials as cement, copper, mirror, and fabrics. "God created our ability to create," said Prof. Thompson. He feels his idea came from God, the most talented of abstract artists. He tried to construct something which would demonstrate his appreciation of small things . . . the clouds, stars, or intrinsic designs on leaves . . .

"Art for Art's Sake" is like the Bible verse Ecclesiastes 1:9.

"The thing that hath been is that which shall be; and that which is done, is that which shall be done; and there is nothing new under the sun." (C. Stanley)

If you look closely you will observe a child playing with a garden hose. The large swirls are the spraying torrents of water; the child is standing on the right side in the painting; and you can recognize the soapy water cascading down his back and also down his chest and upper leg . . . the subject-matter became obvious after the painting was completed. (Dr. Harvey Collins)

MORE THAN JUST FACTS

Many students dread science classes. They don't pertain to their major, so they feel the classes are a waste of time. I disagree with them. Science is more than just a bunch of facts that are unimportant to life. It is more than just evolution, stars and rocks. Science is the study of what God has created.

We have been put together by God in a complex way. Our lives began in a single cell that contained 46 chromosomes. Those chromosomes contained the information for what we would become. Somehow, that one cell knew how to divide, differentiate and grow into a human being.

Stop and look around you. Think what life would be like without trees and plants, rocks and hills, water and animals.

Science has many more benefits than these listed. When you take your "required" science class, be open-minded. There is so much to learn if you want to learn it. (C. Dilts)

Studying: the act of gaining knowledge. Gaining knowledge is one thing ... how one gains it is yet another.

Some try to acquire it in the dorm with Van Halen blaring away. Others prefer the quiet sanctuary of their beds; it's amazing that when people study in bed they resemble someone sleeping. The ever popular boyfriend/girlfriend study routine on third floor Benner library also ranks high. All the couples check the same book that night, "101 Ways to Hold Hands, Giggle, and Whisper Sweet Nothings." A personal favorite is the headbobber. This method is used when someone is so enthralled with a book that they black-out between every other word. This causes the head to bob in an up-and-down fashion.

The word "study" could then be re-defined as "the act of acting like you're gaining knowledge." (By M. Singleton)

Jack Hoekstra is reviewing as the professor goes over the material. This made him well prepared for the next exam. Photo by Z. Burdine

In a December issue of Newsweek magazine, 1984 was declared the "Year of the Yuppie." Plastered across the front page was a Doonesbury cartoon version of these young urban professionals. Donned in running shoes, Walkmans and tweed blazers, these yuppies looked prepared to conquer the world or maybe just survive the proverbial rat race.

These business professionals are now a prominent group in society. Olivet is doing its part to produce its own version of the yuppie. These success-bound business majors are easy to spot. Whether it be a sharply dressed management student preparing for an in class presentation or a blurry-eyed accounting student who never did balance the previous night's assignment, their determination and ambition remain intact.

What then is the difference between a regular yuppie and an Olivet yuppie? Both want to work hard and be successful, but only one has a life centered on Christ. That makes all the difference in the world! (D Preusch)

The smell of hot apple pie, fresh rolls, biscuits, potatoes, and beans drifted out of the Home Ec department and through the halls of Chapman as I prepared my dinner that evening. A full dinner given for four adults was part of the Marketing and Meal Management requirements.

This was only one of the classes the Home Economics department offered. Besides the traditional basic foods and clothing classes, some of the others were nutrition, consumer economics, textiles and design, fashion analysis and Principles of Pattern Design. Principles of Pattern was useful as it showed students how to design garments and then construct those things they had designed. In April, three Home Economics students competed in a fashion, design competition in St. Louis. This included designing and making four garments, then modeling them in the design competition.

The department included a Foods and Nutrition in Business major, a Fashion Merchandising major, a Family Services major, a Home Economics teaching major and a Dietetics major. (By N. Aylor)

FOREIGN LANGUAGE

Most students think that a language major is very insignificant and uninteresting. They think of those in it as people who study grammar for excitement and learn 100 new vocabulary words a week for a good time. Although it is true that language majors study vocabulary and grammar, they study a lot of other things, too.

Language majors take classes of culture, civilization, and literature. They also take classes of conversation in order to learn ways of communicating more effectively with people of different languages and cultures. While studying other cultures of the world, language students learn about art, sociology, education, geography, anthropology, history, politics, music, literature, and religion.

Since the language major involves the study of so many subjects, it is very interesting. It is also an important major, especially since the number of foreignborn-individuals and non-English speaking minorities increases each year in the U.S. For these and many other reasons, the study of languages is both a challenge and a satisfying experience. *By D. #### LENDING A

HEALTHFUL HAND

Nursing, simply stated, is the providing of care that encourages and promotes the health of another person. This includes not only physical health, but health in every aspect of the personality. Providing good nursing care includes being competent, caring, understanding, patient, compassionate, and respectful of others.

Being a Christian nurse means reflecting all of these qualities in nursing care, while serving the Lord. He has provided Christian nurses with a very special ministry. In many instances, God uses illnesses as a means of softening unbelieving hearts.

As Christian nurses we have the opportunity to serve as a witness to people who may otherwise never be touched by Christianity. There is something very unique about a Christian nurse that patients and other health care providers can't help but notice. The difference is the love of Christ encompassing all aspects of nursing care. (P. Nolan)

A DESIRE TO MINISTER

What is a religion major? Let's see if I can remember the average description; loud suits, glasses (because of all the collateral reading), a briefcase, never misses a church service, only knows about and talks about the Bible, oh . . . and walks on water.

Most religion majors aren't like that at all? Sometimes they do wear clothes that don't match, but who hasn't? Religion majors do study and learn about the Bible because they have the huge responsibility of preaching God's Word. A religion major also must study the practical things of the ministry such as calling and church administration.

A religion major is a person called by God to do a special service within the church. Summed up, he is a Christian trying to serve God to the best of his ability through his chosen field of study. (W. Sampson)

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Olivet's Physical Education Department is an exciting place to be, and it is growing all the time. More and more students are seeing the importance of physical activity, and are therefore choosing physical education as their major.

The Kankakee community has grown to appreciate the ONC Physical Education Department. Student teachers are becoming involved with community students of all ages. The schools appreciate their help, and Olivet students enjoy the experience.

The Olivet coaches have also gained respect from local school coaches over the past few years. They have been willing to hold athletic camps to improve the athletic ability of the community students, and have been able to train them in a Christian atmosphere.

The Olivet Physical Education Department will continue to grow in the years to come. It will develop better ideas and new methods of reaching others through its activities. (A. Ruzick)

MUSIC

What would ONC be like without its music majors? They are essential to activities such as entertainment, chapel, dating and exploration. Who but the daring music major would conquer on tours such uncharged wilderness as Disneyworld, Opryland and the sunny beaches of Florida?

And what would ONC do without the entertainment these gifted people provide? They have the guts to face 1500 chapel-goers and be evaluated by the "Amen" scale.

As far as serious music is concerned they have been known to do works like, "The Reluctant Dragon," and "The Twelve Days After Christmas." And of course the music majors are always good for a variety show or two ... or three; but can you "Handel" another presentation of the "Messiah?"

Their final addition to Olivet life is of course, dating. We all know that behind every Religion major is a girlfriend or prospective wife who is a music major or at least plays the piano.

Seriously though, we are happy that we can contribute in our own ways to the betterment of life on the campus of Olivet Nazarene College. (D. Montgomery)

MAJOR UNDECIDED

While in high school we all anticipated the most important time in our lives — college! First, the big decision was made, whether or not to attend college. Then we had to decide what classes to take, and where to take them, and of course, how to pass them once we started.

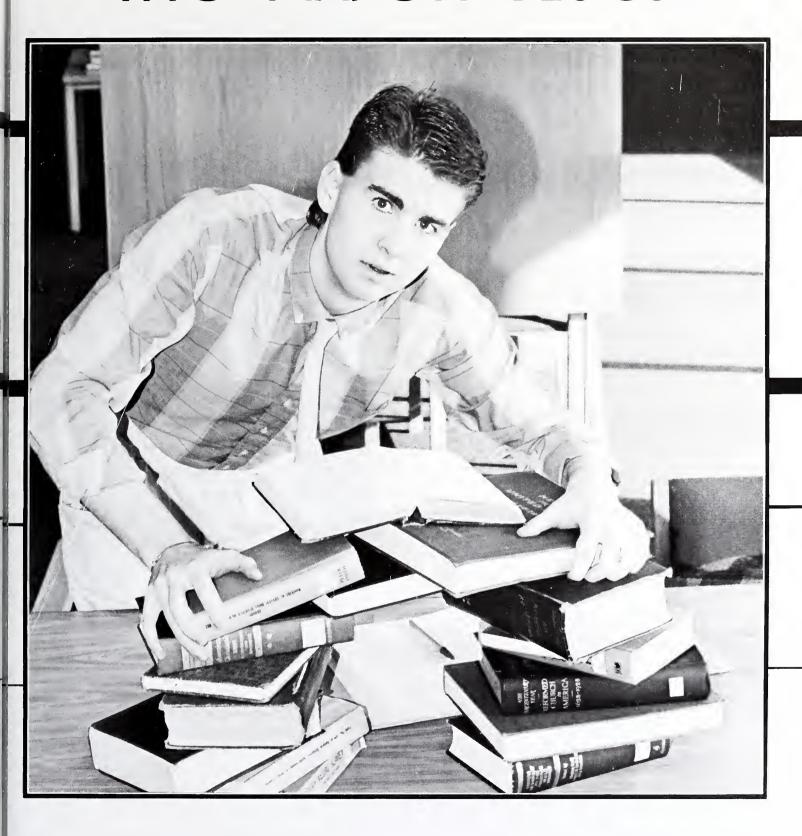

We all remember as teenagers looking up to college students and imitating their every move. Now the decisions are in our hands. Although some of us have already established our majors, we can definitely sympathize with those who have not.

Remember when we all wanted to be a fireman or a police officer. Now, we see how little their earnings are, and sort-of chuckle at our innocence and even ignorance. We all now strive for the excitement of a fireman, but the salary of a doctor.

Incoming students at times hastily decide on a major, and end up changing it at least once. An undecided major is a frightening circumstance, but we all seem to live through it.

Board of Trustees

The Olivet Board of Trustees held their annual business meeting on campus October 2, 1985. The board includes district superintendents, pastors and laymen from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin. Those across the front row

Members of the Board of Trustees are nominated by the District Assemblies in Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin. The first item of business in the Annual Meeting in October is the official election of these nominees to their places on the Board. The two alumni members of the Board of Trustees are nominated by the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association and are chosen by ballot of all alumni.

Half of these elected members are laymen and half are ministers. The District Superintendents of the ten Districts of the Olivet Region and the President of the College are members of the Board by virtue of their office.

These men who serve on the Board of Trustees are elected because of their churchmanship and not because they are rich and famous. Many people find pleasure in the fact that buildings on the campus of Olivet Nazarene College are named for people who have rendered great service rather than acquired great wealth.

The Board holds an Annual Meeting on the first Wednesday in each October, preceded by a day of vigorous committee work. Each member of the Board is assigned a significant place to serve on one of the standing committees. The Board elects men from its ranks to serve on the Business and Finance Committee as well as the Executive Committee.

A follow-up meeting of the Board is held following graduation each May. The Executive Committee holds one official meeting each February to deal with salaries, charges, budget, and promotions. The Executive Committee is assigned the work of the Board between the October and May meetings each year.

Special committees of the Board, such as the Building Committee, are appointed as needed, and serve until their ad hoc function is completed.

Members of the Administrative Team — Academic Dean, Business Manager, Dean of Students, and Director of Development — report in writing to the President each September. Material from their reports is included in the President's "State of the College" Report which is delivered during a dinner meeting of the Trustees, college administrators, division chairmen, and their wives. This address is presented to the Board in writing and is received officially in the Annual Meeting the morning after its delivery at the dinner.

classification, alma mater relatives, g.p.a.'s, social activities, and positions held, are part of student make-ups, but — 812145; freshmen, student council president, cheerleader and a 3.999 G.P.A., are only the characteristics of one student. From the beginning to the end of a college career you participate in the things which mold you into an individual.

High School hardly prepares us for the busy schedules and classes of our freshman year. When you pull onto campus you see the cars of hundreds of students. You wonder how you can be the most inconspicuous - and stay unnoticed. Automatically the returning students categorize you as freshmen. The students to initiate into college life. Freshmen — the "little kids" who wear their best clothes on Saturdays; the girls who hover and lineup at the icecream machine; those students with dazed looks asking, "Where does the bus pick us up to go to the late skate;" or they ask a friend, "If the open house for girls is at 7:30-9:30, what do we do if we have classes all day?" Better yet is the freshman girls learning about "snipe-hunting."

The freshman year is one to take chances and try new things. The year to get involved and meet new people, and make new friends. The new people in town — the ones who experiment and learn. The year ends and the toughest one is past.

The sophomore year brings a time of rejoicing: you have established your g.p.a., you have made friends, and now it is time to initiate the freshman — and imitate the juniors. Sophomores are laid back and carefree. They try hard to be adult, but then the "Go Ape" party happens and it's freshman behavior time.

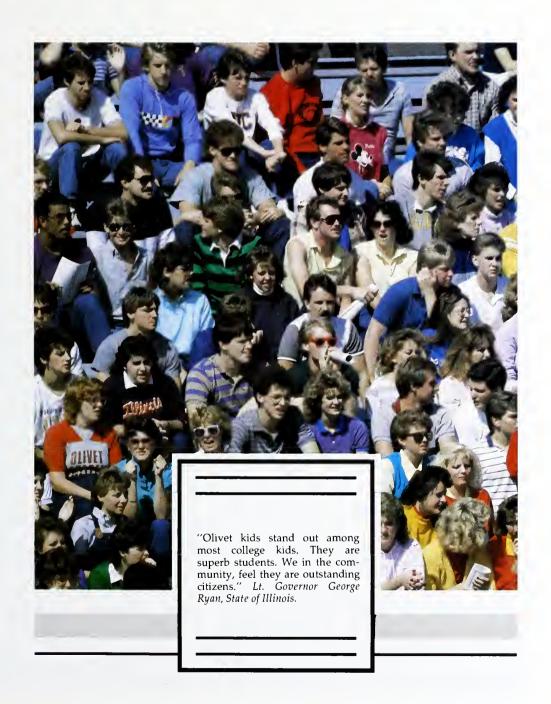

The most difficult year — the junior year. The year to run for class positions because everyone knows you now. Vanity decreases — it is okay not to take a shower before supper. Studies become more important and majors are declared. It is okay to skip school functions and athletic games.

Before you know it, that freshman becomes a senior. He is no longer a classification, but a senior. One we all looked to and learned from. They have established themselves. Other students recognize them for their achievements, professors recognize their growth, parents recognize maturity, and the seniors realize they have become unique individuals, and have gained respect. No one notices that they are still growing - because they have reached the goal of individuality. 👰

ON THE WAY OUT . . .

Almost out of time

Seniors were different. We were the class that all other classes looked to. We were important, respected, and impressive. We had a strong Christian faith that bound us with our Lord Jesus Christ. Our goals were set high; we aimed for the best. The larger community that surrounded our small community noticed who we were. After living there for nine months out of each year, we had made our trips to the laundromats, restaurants, clothing shops, churches, hospitals, and grocery stores. Many of our classmates had even secured jobs in that larger community. Others had given their time to work on community health projects. We were noticed and known. Was it because we smiled? Or, was it because we wore dress pants instead of blue jeans? Maybe it was both of these, and yet was it our honesty and love that touched more lives. Seniors were different. We walked to class confidently and carried an expression with us that said, "I'm learning and I'm growing ... and I'm almost out of time." Yet, our excitement and anticipation for Graduation Day had us literally counting the days. If someone wanted to know what class to pick or which professor not to take, all they had to do was ask a senior. Or, maybe there was a major decision to be made concerning God, or a relationship, or career . . . all one had to do, was ask a senior . . . chances were good that we'd know how to help. Seniors were different. We knew that people expected us to be leaders, ready, not unsure and scared. But, those two words entered almost every senior's mind. Stu Boyce had said it quite well at our senior class party. He told us to stop asking each other what we planned to do after graduation and for the rest of our lives! Why? Because underneath all of our boldness, confidence, and superiority, we realized that there were many more decisions to be made. Yes, seniors were different. We were strong and yet we knew we were not yet complete. (D. Starkweather)

WHAT NEXT?

The Real World

By the Senior year, one has been in school seventeen solid years. Sounds unbelievable, doesn't it? The School setting made choices easy. The most difficult choices made were what classes to take and who to live with. But after turning the tassel, what next?

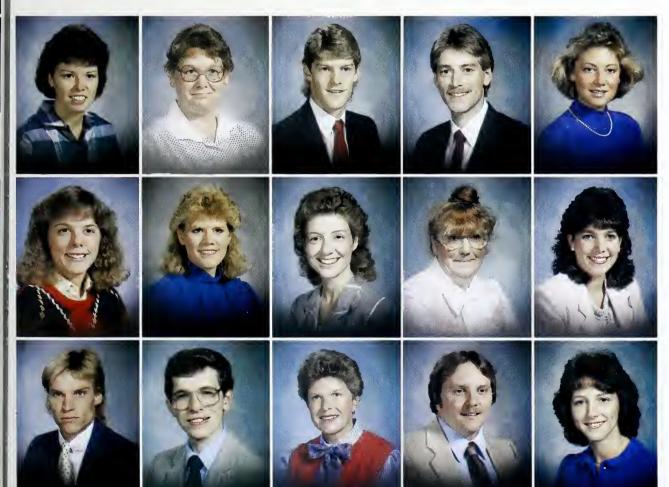

For some, marriage lies ahead, for others, grad school. For most, it will be time to see if the apron strings we have cut will be long enough to tie on to something else — a career.

Mr. Webster defines career as "a profession or occupation which one trains for and pursues as a lifework." For the past four years, we have been trained so that we could find our own lifework out in the "real world." No matter if that work be nursing, a CPA, a teacher, or a writer, we each have the duty to believe in ourselves and in those around us.

This poem by Amanda Bradley, found on a greeting card, sums up one senior's feelings.

"We all have our own separate pathway to take, our own destinations to choose. We all have our own contributions to make, our own special talents to use — We all have our own kind of life to pursue, our own kind of dream to be weaving . . . And we all have the power to make wishes come true, as long as we keep on believing." (L. Johnson)

AGONY OF DEFEAT

A Broken Tradition

Yell leaders Brad Skaggs and Ron Brodien lead seniors in "let's see you get down!" Spirit was shown in many ways during Ollies Follies. Photos by S. Wiese

To say the least Ollies Follies turned out to be a hard pill to swallow. Since my freshman year, seniors winning Ollies Follies has always been, without a doubt, a tradition. Seniors are always the team to beat. As everyone knows this year was no exception.

Ollies Follies started off in usual fashion. The seniors dominated the field of football and the court in volleyball. However, it was a progressive downhill motion from there. Every senior knew that in order to win the day's festivities we would have to do great in the evening events. We did everything but that. What a disaster — my heart pounds with anxiety just remembering our skit, and Milo Singleton with makeup on his face, trying to impersonate a girl. One bright spot in the evening to be proud of was our talent. They did not win but we were all proud of them for not embarrassing the class.

As the final scores were being tallied a sick feeling came over me. I knew that if we were going to win,

God would have to work a great miracle. I began to wonder just how God was going to help us win. Then, as if someone opened a window and let in the fresh air, I realized that God did work a miracle! It did not matter what the score was. It mattered who had the most fun and showed the most spirit. Sorry, juniors, the seniors won in that category, hands down. All day long we supported each other by encouragement with cheers, chants, and even "getting down!"

In the spirit of competition, I want to say to the juniors, "Congratulations on a fine win!" However, as you will learn, next year the winner of Ollies Follies will be forgotten but the fond memories of a great class like that of '86 will stay with you for an eternity.

I also remember someone saying, "It does not matter who wins or loses — it is how you play the game." The seniors played with class and dignity. Our "true blue" had shown throughout the day. Keep your heads high, seniors, in the things that really matter — we won! (J. Bosca)

Like the common cold, the exact cause and cure of Senioritis is unknown. We only knew that, also like the common cold, senioritis seemed to strike in one particular season of the year. Once caught, it was extremely hard to shake.

It started with a general apathy toward certain classes, and would spread until the student was unable to even enter the library, except to search for others to join in some foolishness. In the final stages, the victim was unable to do anything other than have fun. Along the way, the ability to distinguish one chapel speaker from another was lost. All lectures sounded alike, and the amount of notes taken decreased as the size and complexity of the doodles on the page increased. A strange habit of repeatedly humming "Pomp and Circumstance" also developed.

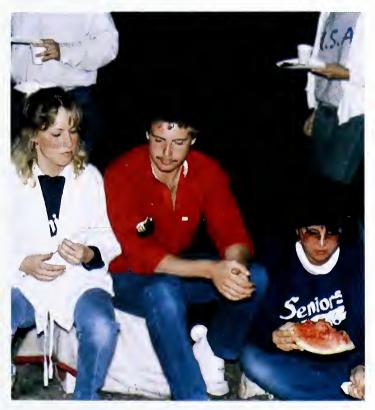

While there was no cure, there were a few things one did to make oneself feel better when senioritis hit. Slept until noon, got plenty of sunshine, like the kind at the state park, ate slowly (tried to take an hour and a half at each meal), did not lift anything heavy (like textbooks or a pencil), and above all did not panic! (S. Bassett)

Leadership skills during the year of 1985-86 were well represented through this year's Senior Class. (In order to appreciate the Senior Class leaders better, one needs to fully understand the qualities of leadership.) Leadership, the spark that exists within an individual igniting enthusiasm and unity among students. Although a wide range of personalities exists among our leaders, it was important that the spark was alive within them all. The spark was the source that drove them on to see their goals realized through the students they served. The quality of leadership was determined through the leaders' willingness to serve. The election results of the previous year reflected the trust reserved for each leader from the Senior Class. The Senior leaders developed integrity through the accomplishment of goals.

The office of ASG President was appealing to Rod Thill because of the experience he would gain. "I had never done anything like this before so I figured it would give me something to do besides study. I have found that the office was a way to meet people and it was a lot of fun," Rod said. He learned quickly to delegate his many responsibilities to others. The scripture he drew strength from throughout the year's responsibilities was Matthew 28:19, 20.

His long-term goal was to begin the plans for the building of the lce Rink. As ASG President, Rod's deepest desire was to motivate student involvement and reach the lonely.

Teresa Ulmet was Vice-President of Spiritual Life for the past two years. As a Senior she assumed her role with a deeper level of maturity and sensitivity. She advised students in chapel during Spiritual Life Week to put their inner world in order for everything else to go smoothly. She provided many opportunities for students to order their private world through activities like Prayer Band, Life Song, Disciples in Drama, and Evangels. Teresa was elected 1985-86 Homecoming Queen because of her leadership example.

Chris Peal as Senior Class President was determined to accomplish the year's goals through the power of prayer. His desire was to show Seniors Christ through the actions of his council.

The leaders in the Senior Class set an example for underclassmen who will in turn be the leaders of tomorrow. (C. Crawford)

"PEOPLE SPIRIT"

Class of '86

The spirit that once prevailed within us as freshmen is gone. This spirit is classified as "school spirit," whereas the spirit the seniors had could only be labeled "people spirit," which stems from that dreaded disease known as "senoritis."

Let's face it, the only earthly forces that help us battle this disease in the last days were the diplomas in May and the people around us. Thus, an atmosphere of "people spirit" was prevalent among the seniors. They were not going to miss the elevator in Burke, football games, or the quad; instead they were going to miss the people in the elevator, people in the grandstands, and reminiscing in the quad with . . . people.

Sure, the class of '86 had spirit second to none when it came time to show it in activities or whatever, but it was nothing compared to the "people spirit" which was prevalent in May, (sort of like the last showing of M*A*S*H*); able to leave the place but not the people. (M. Singleton)

THE THRILL 0F VICTORY

When one thinks of the 1985 version of Ollies Follies, the first thing that comes to mind is the "Broken Tradition." Seldom in the vast history of that auspicious event has the senior class not risen above the underclassmen and trounced in the day's activities, but it is not to be this year.

The day began with the seniors winning the football competition. The juniors made a great comeback and won the volleyball game. The competition became a race between the two oldest classes, each one taking first or second place in the following competitions.

Two key events turned tide in favor of the "tradition breakers." These were the pyramid, and the skit competition.

The pyramid competition began with seven-second times for the freshmen and sophomores. Then the juniors had their time, a record setting time, of 4.9 seconds. The seniors were very tense. The pyramid slowly rose, but in a tragic turn of events the pyramid tumbled down guicker than it had been built. Not only did this happen once, but twice!!

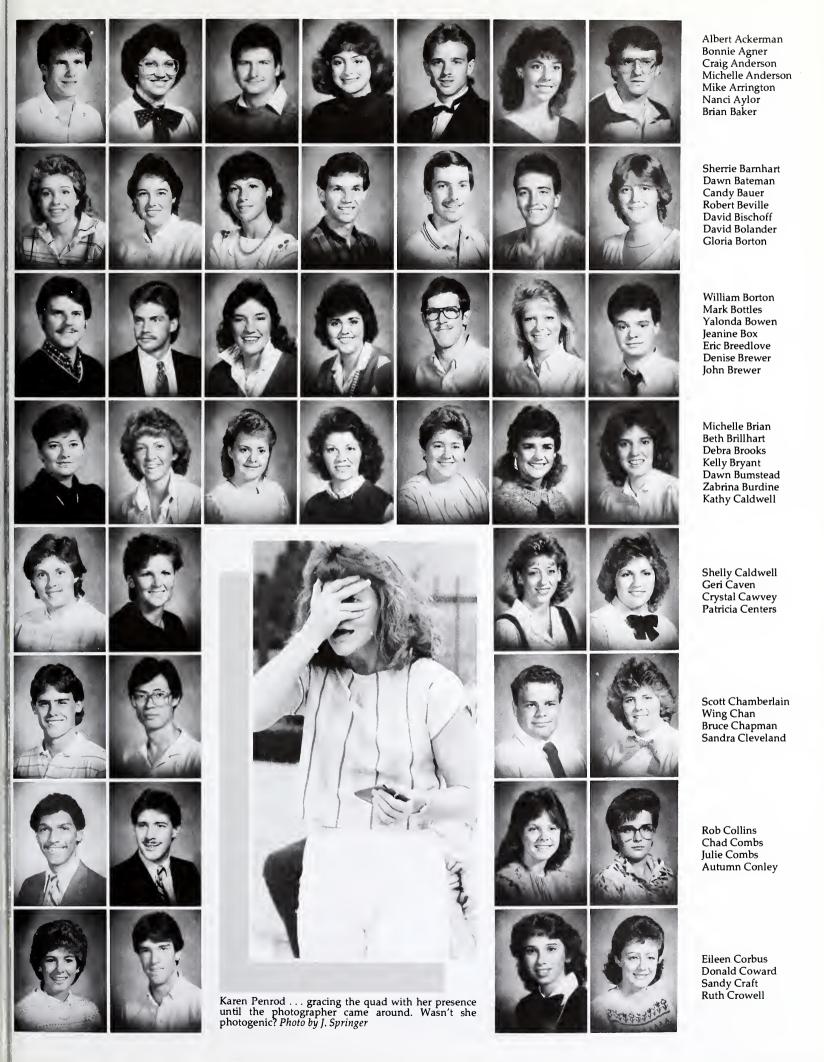

With the juniors edging out in front in the day's activities, the competition moved indoors for talent and skits.

The evening was filled with the usual smiley-faced students, and fun, but then two exciting things happened. One the senior skit was a dismal failure, and two — the junior skit was outstanding. The skit included not only laughter, but ingenuity and talent. Over twenty students participated in the skit under the direction of Laura Urish and David Rees. The freshmen turned in the usual rerun skit but did perform well. The sophomores received a close second for their depiction of "People's Court." As the day of events closed, the point totals showed the seniors with four-hundred and twenty-five points to the fourhundred and thirty-five points of the

Yes, the 1985 version of Ollies Follies will be remembered (maybe), as a tradition breaker, but it will also be remembered for the fun and activities that accompanied the TRADITION BREAKER.

IT'S

RECESS TIME

As Sophomores, we had proven that we were quite comfortable with the routine of Olivet life, the newness of our Freshman year was over, and we were now mature and becoming quite educated. We had fewer phone calls home and spent more time with our friends from campus.

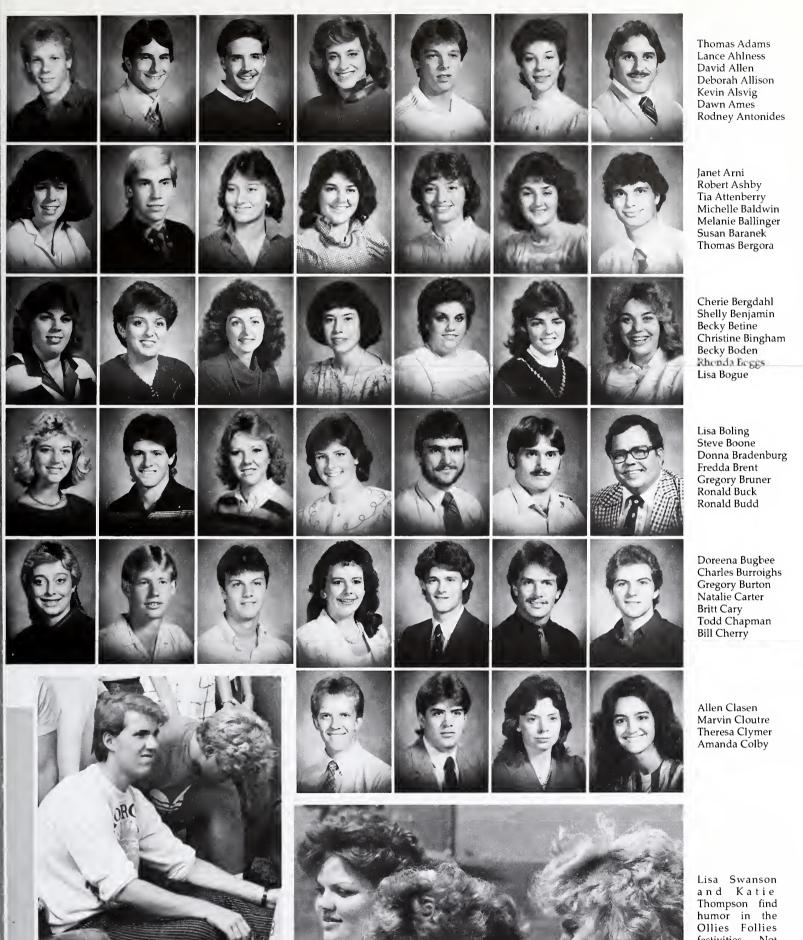

So, one month into our sophomore year the class council decided it was time to celebrate our newly acquired sophomore maturity and throw our class a party, but one with a unique format. "The Sophomore Class Recess" was based upon our grade school days. It was the first time our class had come together since our Freshman class party, a year and one month earlier. And we were long overdue!! It was recess time!

College Church Christian Life Center was decorated with pictures drawn by local elementary school children. The gym floor was divided into those popular recess games such as four-square and hopscotch. A P.A. system was set up to amplify our favorite songs from our grade school days such as "Sesame Street Theme" and the theme from "Mr. Rogers Neighborhood." Soon it was time to begin! As people entered they were given a red or yellow name tag in the shape of a duck or squirrel which automatically divided the class into four teams. After a few opening comments it was time to begin the games. The Pan Game and "Simon Sez" started things off. Door prizes such as a paddle ball set, a Strawberry Shortcake makeup set, and a Ronald McDonald doll were given away through the night. Next it was our grade school favorite: "Show and Tell Time" with several of our classmates sharing with us. Then it was story time and a few more games of four square, jump rope and hopscotch.

We next read the survey sheets which asked the highlights of our grade school days. Getting cooties, and being sent to the principal's office for many reasons were among the many answers.

After more door prizes were given away we settled back to watch our favorite movie star of grade school . . . Woody Woodpecker! After many laughs with ol' Woody we quieted our hearts and had a devotional time to thank God for the unified class which we are proud to be a part of. As it has been since our grade school days, recess will remain to be the highlight of our year! (P. Riley) Photo by J. Springer

OLIVET'S PRIDE

"Olivet's Pride" was the theme for the 1985-86 Sophomore Class. With that theme in mind, the class president, Paul Riley, pulled the whole class into the spirit with yellow "OP" (Olivet's Pride) T-shirts. The class of "88" was bound to be great this school year for Paul had a wonderful council working for him.

They opened the year with the sophomores hosting the annual freshman class party which was for the sole purpose of having fun and meeting fellow freshmen. One of the year's highlights was the building of the homecoming project which won first place in the class division. People worked many hours to put the 16-foot boat together which incorporated the homecoming theme "The Race Is On." The boat was cruising past an old bathtub containing the "Du-Hawk" mascot of the college that we played in our homecoming football game.

The rest of the year contained activities to enhance the total sophomore experience of an exciting school year. (L. Reedy)

FRESHMEN PUT THE PIECES TOGETHER

You buy the box with a picture of a covered bridge amidst autumn colored trees, preconceiving the feeling of satisfaction you will get when you duplicate this scene. Suddenly your enthusiasm turns to a prediction of monumental effort. The picture of the bridge is in five-hundred separate pieces of all different shapes, each containing its own unidentifiable picture, and the task of interlocking these units lands hard on the original idea of accomplishment that you started out with. With time and effort, and a liberal measure of patience, you sort and compare shapes and content. You test the compatability of pieces to see how well they fit together, and eventually you accomplish the task of building a bridge surrounded with trees much like the picture on the box.

This illustration is fairly predictable, and is along the same line as "the members of the body" passage in the Bible. It has to do with a group of people of all different looks and faces, placed in a location and mixed together, ready to be put together in friendships, with categories of similar interests, and classes of smaller groups who all are part of the whole picture. Now, it would be errant to say that the person who puts the pieces together, who sorts and compares, who judges the look and shape of each piece, is one of the pieces. Or a group of pieces. You see, whether there are bigger or prettier or more uniquely shaped pieces in the box, the fact is, they are still members, and some other piece in that box has just as big a part in creating the whole picture as they do.

creating the whole picture as they do.

The Class of 1989 were freshmen this year. The box they were put in was a new scene, a different atmosphere, and the other pieces that were in the box had already been pretty well sorted out and compared. But the picture couldn't be completed without the rest of the pieces. It wasn't necessary to try and "make" everyone fit the big puzzle; we belong here. We were needed, and the whole idea of a body of people or a collection of pieces fitting together was to create an overall scene — in this case to glorify God in our unity.

The one who put the puzzle together wasn't the Freshman class president. It wasn't the council. Those people were all pieces of the puzzle. Likewise, it wasn't any upperclassman who had words of wisdom, or an attitude that spurred our class into action.

If you haven't already reached the resolution of this illustration, here it is: God bought the box. He put the pieces in it. It's His puzzle, and He is the only one capable of comparing, judging, and fitting individual units together to make the picture on the cover. That's just too big a task for any of us. And any organization leader or council, panel, board, or committee who thinks they can be responsible for fitting two pieces of the puzzle together have some discusssion due with the Person who made the original trees, and created what it took to even imagine a covered bridge.

The Class of '89 did not have to concern itself with fitting in or being compatible with the other people in the ONC picture. God was responsible for that. All we were responsible for was getting in the box and asking, "Where do you want me?"

FRESH SPIRIT

Every fall brings a new crop of students to campus, and this year was no exception. They came from all over our educational region in a variety of shapes and sizes. Late August they were seen pulling up to Chapman and Williams in U-Hauls or the family cars. This was a big event on campus. Even before registration, upperclassmen gathered around to get a first look at the incoming freshmen.

Traditionally, freshmen always have been noticed, and again, this year was no exception. There were the ones always trying to act like upperclassmen, but never quite succeeding, who were watched by upperclassmen with uiet tolerance and amusement. "Look, she's arrying a purse," and "There goes a herd of 25 of them now," were common phrases neard in the first few weeks of school.

This fall, however, upperclassmen who gathered 'round to watch the incoming reshmen had a big surprise. The Class of '89 rought with it a spark that caused everyone o stand back and take notice. The traditional ict of trying to go unnoticed did not happen. The freshmen stood out — were proud, and and reason to be. Their spark burned brighter, surprising us all by not coming in last place in OLLIES Follies." By Homecoming their unity was shown by receiving the grand prize for Homecoming decorations. And everyone wallowed hard! The Class of '89 showed us all what it meant to pull together to become one reat group. They stood out and deserved to e noticed! (T. Mitchell)

FACILITATIVE AND STEADFAST

From syllabi to snow removal, lecture to letter, exams to explanations — Olivet's faculty and staff accept these responsibilities and more.

These facilitative faculty and steadfast staff members use books, blackboards, computers, phones, calculators and tractors to keep each day moving forward. By blending minds and machinery, these talented and trustworthy men and women make "Education with a Christian Purpose" work.

And that work takes place behind lecterns or typewriters, with overheads or mowers, in counseling about careers or settling dorm disputes, by averaging grades or totaling fees, while using chalk or a paint brush, in scoring tests or computing schedules, and while giving assignments or distributing mail.

Each faculty or staff person has an assigned task. But beyond the job description is a deeper dedication to love students, the college, and to serve Christ through each day's work.

Yes, students, parents and visitors have to notice Olivet's faculty and staff. They are a constant and committed crew. (Leora Legacy)

ACCOUNTING FOR EXCELLENCE

Thirty-five Years of Successful Service

"Coming to Olivet was the best decision I ever made," states Professor Leonard Anderson. After 36 successful years at Olivet, he believed now was the time for him to retire.

Born and reared in East St. Louis, Illinois, Anderson attended grade and high school there. After serving three years in the U.S. Navy, he attended St. Louis University on the G.I. Bill.

Anderson received a bachelor's degree in accounting in 1949 and continued work toward a master's degree, which he received in 1952. In 1966 he became a Certified Public Accountant.

The East St. Louis Nazarene Church was where he met his wife Josephine, who is a Hammond, Indiana, native. They have a daughter, Pamela.

While in college, Anderson said that he had considered teaching high school and had taken some education courses, but when he graduated he was planning on going into public accounting. However, there were no jobs available at that time. At the suggestion of one of Anderson's former Sunday School students, Olivet offered him a job as a business professor.

Anderson says the way everything came together he knew it was God's will for them to be at Olivet. The first year passed and suddenly it has become 36 years.

In 1955 Anderson became chairman of the Department of Business Administration and served in that position until the current semester, when his successor, Dr. Kenneth Armstrong, took over the post.

Anderson says that he has enjoyed working at Olivet for two reasons: 1) He can pursue teaching, and 2) He can pursue his profession as a public accountant. In fact, he now shares a public accounting office with Prof. Shea.

"If there was one thing that I could tell all Olivet students," he says, "it would be this: God may give us an alternative plan for our lives if we miss His best, but it is possible to find out and know what God's will for our lives is! Leave no stone unturned in preparation for His Service." (Sue Wheeler)

We noticed many faces on campus that were familiar to us. But none compared to those behind the scenes. Those who made the campus run, those who ''kept the ball bouncing."

We did not always know their names, but we did know their faces and we could pick them out in a crowd of hundreds by their dedication, loyalty, and thefficiency in serving the students.

The bookstore and post office, publicity, admissions, and their secretaries, Jim Conversations at the Post Office . . .

It's here, it's here, my package is here!!

I need a stamp — make that two.

I know they're hiding my mail.

I didn't bring my pink card, do I have to have it?

My mom said she sent me a package, could you check to see if it is here.

I forgot my combination.

Is my brother's box bigger than mine? Better not be.

Are you sure there isn't any mail for me?

If I mail this now what time will it go out?

I accidently dropped a piece of mail in the wrong side . . .

ach of us had our own talents and abilities. Some of us strengthened our abilities by demonstrating them in organizations and clubs. Clubs were the answers to expressing our ideas and changing some of the things we felt needed improved upon.

Organizations were made up of leaders, organizers, thinkers, workers, speakers and beginners.

The leaders were those who stood out in a crowd and were chosen by students to represent them in all aspects of student life. There were student government leaders, leaders in men's and women's associations and virtually every other specialized club.

Leadership positions were held by those the students chose to represent them. They acquired a large number of new responsibilities — and were required to make class and group decisions. At times their hard work and dedication left them frustrated and concerned that no one noticed their efforts.

There was not one organization which did not have their organizers. Whether a secretary, vice president or volunteer — every club had one.

For those more low key and without a desire to lead — were opportunities to be a part of the clubs. As students noticed, the most successful organizations were those with a lot of participation.

No matter what the organization, or positions held, students who were involved were noticed!

ASG. Aleatory Student Generation, Association of Student Ghostbusters, or was it Associated Student Government?

Even if one was unaware of what the three letters represented, everyone noticed the organization and student leaders in ASG.

Each member of ASG has a special personality that contributed favorably to the whole council. Rod Thill will always be remembered for his anecdotes. Jay Martinson will never again forget his copy deadlines. Zoe Burdine was famous for taking unexpected pictures. Betsy Norris will always remember the pillars at coronation. Jo Williamson had balloons in chapel. Scott Fitzgerald had tired eyes from looking at financial reports, and Brad Wheeler always had a clean office. Yes, the ASG council was definitely noticed. (C. ## Planning For Good Times

Social Committee

Every student needed a social life and Social Committee helped provide that opportunity for Olivet students.

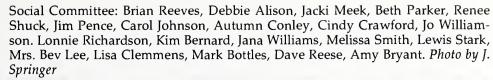

Various activities that were held throughout the year were Ollies Follies, Octoberfest, the Christmas Banquet and Spring Fling.

Ollies Follies included class competition and a variety show that was the final show-down between classes.

Some of the other things that Social Committee did was to sponsor a Larnell Harris concert, have a Red Room night and have all-school parties.

Social Committee was noticed as they helped students balance their academic life with some fun social life. Many times working behind the scenes, the committee made the students' lives more interesting. (N. Aylor)

WRA-MRA

Working for You

MRA

MRA this year was noted for quality events and the variety of people it attracted. According to its president, Brad Wheeler, MRA hosted the first ever waterslide party in August, a November lipsync program, and a 3-D monster film. The club sponsored with Social Committee a brother-sister floor competition. The theme was racing. MRA also sold intramural shirts with club sponsor Wendy Parsons, and rented a large screen television for the October 24 World Series game.

Wheeler said he was pleased with how many different kinds of people were involved in MRA, adding that going to MRA activities this year was "a good way to meet people." (C. Shira)

WRA

It was Thursday night, and voices were hushed as Mrs. Lora Lee Parrott opened the envelope. Everyone listened intently to the words "Your new 1985 Homecoming Queen is "

The scene just described was only one of the many activities that the Women's Residence Association was responsible for. Some of the activities they sponsored besides Coronation were Mr. ONC, parent weekend, twirp weekends, and women's dorm activities.

WRA was headed by President Betsy Norris. Other officers included Vice-President Cheryl Dilts, Treasurer Jilleen Simons, and Secretary Kandra Dilts. Together, along with the other members, they successfully led the women residents toward a productive year. (K. Dexter)

They Had to Be Noticed

Aurora

"What time is it?"
"It's 5 a.m., why?"

"Cause I'm almost finished my pages and d like to leave Ludwig before everyone tarts coming in for breakfast."

This conversation could be heard in Ludvig basement the night before deadlines. Ill-nighters were not uncommon as editors f various sections were finishing up the me-consuming details of identifying people n pictures, writing captions, typing captions nd copy, and finalizing layouts.

The yearbook staff had four deadlines they ad to meet during the year. If those were not net, there was a chance the yearbooks would be delivered late.

The theme of the yearbook was determined by Editor Zoe Burdine. "They had to be noticed" was a theme that described Olivet students well, because students were noticed by the community and outsiders as being special and different from other college students.

The yearbook staff members were noticed throughout the year as some took pictures, and others spent large quantities of time working with those pictures to form pages. Their work was especially noticed when the yearbook was finished. (N. Aylor)

The News and Views

Everyone standing in line at Saga had one, as did the people sitting at the tables eating supper. It was a Thursday and the Glimmerglass had just come out. Everyone was reading one, catching up on the campus news and views.

The Glimmerglass featured campus candids, news line, the editor's corner, columnists, viewpoint, ONC voices and personals. These items made the Glimmerglass noticeable in some way to every student on campus.

The Glimmerglass reflected the attitudes of the students. Students were encouraged to write in their views on various subjects that were covered. Twelve editions of the paper came out periodically throughout the year. Junior Carol Rittenhouse commented, "I noticed the viewpoint section in the Glimmerglass. I liked the controversial issues." ## At the Top

Seniors. The word described the oldest group on campus, those ready to graduate, those looked up to as the ones at the top of the totem pole.

The Senior Class had a Fourth of July theme for their class party. Other events that took place throughout the year were the Senior Class variety show and Senior chapel.

Junior Class

Up In The Ranks

"The class of the eighties" served its title well as it stood out above the others in its unity. This unity was displayed with overwhelming pride when the juniors won the Ollies Follies class competition. Some of the all-school activities that the juniors held were the halloween party, late skates and the junior-senior banquet.

The uniqueness of the Junior Class developed and was strengthened through a strong council and a supportive class, making the Junior Class one everyone noticed. (D. Meador)

Olivet's Pride

From class recess to computer dates to late skates the Sophomore Class carried out their them? of Olivet's Pride. Yellow OP tee-shirts were in abundance as the sophomores promoted class spirit.

The sophomore council planned activities for the Sophomore Class alone and sponsored all-school parties. The Christmas film and the fun fare were two of the events planned. Paul Riley, class president, commented, "We tried to be a class that not only benefited the whole class, but also benefited the school." (N. Aylor)

Freshman

Noticed ... Naturally

An observer might have wondered at the crowd of freshmen headed toward Kresge Auditorium just before 9:30 p.m. one evening a month. But the crowd just meant the freshman devotions had been scheduled and a special speaker had come to talk to the class.

This was one of the things the freshmen did during the year. The theme of the class was unity in Christ, and class devotions were an important part of carrying that out.

Enthusiasm was seen in the class as everyone was interested in getting involved. Freshmen are always noticed because they're the new ones on campus, but this class was also noticed as a vital part of the whole campus community. (N. Aylor)

Designed to meet needs

Spiritual Life

Spiritual Life was a vital part for many students on campus. The program offered several different oppor-tunities of ministry on and off campus for students. Under the direction of Vice President Teresa Ulmet, Life-Song, Omega Production, Evangels, Compas-sionate Ministries and Prayer Band were all designed to meet the needs of those ministering within the

to meet the needs of those ministering within the organization and also those being ministered to.

Prayer Band was a time of fellowship by students, for students. At 6:00 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays Thursdays, students would meet in Kelley Prayer Chapel for a time of sharing and worshipping Jesus together. A wide variety of student speakers and singers participated in the Prayer Band program, thus providing a 45-minute time of spiritual renewal for those who came. those who came.

Life-Song met the needs of churches across the educational region in practical ways. Various teams of five to seven students witnessed, held youth programs, taught Sunday School, preached and sang. The groups ministered to many churches throughout the year.

Omega Productions was a group that has a unique drama ministry. This group visited local churches by invitation and worked with puppets and skits. They also worked on a Homecoming project that won a Evangels had a specialized ministry of visitation to Kankakee area nursing homes, jails, boy's homes, and a mental health center as well as the systematic responsibility of a Children's Church on Sunday mornings.

"Compassionate Ministry's objective was to show the love of Christ with our hands, not only with our mouths," commented Scott Chamberlain, director. Groups within Compassionate Ministries included Sonrise, a mission group to inner city Chicago, a business group, a work group that ministered to area churches, a Haiti work-and-witness group, and Alive — an adult literacy teaching program. One of the activities Compassionate Ministries headed was the hunger walk, in which $12,000 was raised. "Community people also participated in the walk, raising money for those without food," Chamberlain said, "I'd like to see the entire school catching the vision to "I'd like to see the entire school catching the vision, to feel compassion, not just for the world, but with the world, a gut feeling that they need to be doing something about." ## Giving Beautiful Music

Concert Band

Florida here we come! The trip to Florida over Christmas vacation was a main focus for Concert Band. The band held two car washes in the parking lot of Reed Hall of Science, sold candy, and had other fundraising projects for their Florida goal.

Some new events this year included the "spirit band." The "spirit band" played at the home football games and helped give spirit and enthusiasm to the crowd in the stands. The band also played at basketball games throughout the season.

Traditional events included the fall retreat, three weekend tours, a Christmas concert in chapel and the band banquet in Chicago the end of April.

Besides being noticed as a performance group, the band also was noticed for its closeness among the band members. Also a band member could be spotted in the black uniform carrying an instrument case. Throughout the year, the band members did accomplish their goals as they became better musically and well as growing in their relationship with the Lord. (N. Aylor).

Sharing Musical Talent

Orpheus

Orpheus Choir was noticed this year because of the many places their voices were heard. The choir hosted a variety show, went on fall and spring tours, sang on campus in chapel and parent's weekend, and sang at Praise Gathering in Indianapolis and at the Music Educators National Conference in Anaheim, California, in April.

Their Anaheim trip was the special event of the year as they worked to raise money through various fund raising projects. Candy bars were sold, a variety show was performed and Orpheus Alumni even pitched in some funds to make the trip possible. (N. Aylor)

Concert Singers

"I liked the small group of Concert Singers. There was a better chance to know individuals," commented Dawn Bateman. Concert Singers was a close knit group that practiced twice a week. Their small size gave them an opportunity to sing for small churches and occasions demanding a smaller group than Orpheus. Members had auditioned for Concert Singers by singing a hymn and a scale and most importantly, blending with the other members of the group. (N. Aylor)

Treble Clef

If you had walked by the choral room in Larsen any Monday, Wednesday or Friday at 2:30 p.m., you would have heard the sounds of female voices practicing for the many engagements they had throughout the year.

For Treble Clef, the year held fall and spring weekend tours, a Homecoming concert, the Messiah, the Treble Clef-Vikings variety show and a choral workshop. Dawn Singell commented, "It's a fun group to be in. There are a lot of friendly girls in Treble Clef."

"That's show biz" was just one of the events that Vikings had scheduled this year. "That's show biz" was the theme of the Vikings-Treble Clef variety show. Acts in the show featured selections from musicals.

Vikings agenda also included fall and spring tours, singing in Chapel, the Messiah and a trip to New York over Spring Break. Brent Mitchell commented, "Vikings has a good spirit and it's a strong spiritual group. We enjoy singing and its ministry." (N. Aylor)

TOUGH JOB... Somebody's got to do it

R.A.'S

"I have to admit, at first I wasn't thrilled with the new plans. Being suddenly switched from an upperclassman floor in McClain to a freshman floor in Nesbitt wasn't exactly my idea of a good way to start my junior year or my first year as an R.A. After all, I had lived with the same friends for two years. I was sure my "isolation" from them would change our friendship. Well, things certainly changed. I now have a greater appreciation for my old friends and 36 new friends, besides. Sure, there were late (usually loud) study sessions, practical jokes, and endless questions about policies, but the freshmen had a refreshing attitude that Olivet was the best place to be. They have shown me a fresh perspective on what Olivet is all about." M. Wedmore

MENC / Music Club

The Music Educators National Conference is a prestigious organization including many music educators from all over the U.S. This professional organization includes many student chapters such as our club. Olivet has had an MENC chapter for over ten years for those music students who have an interest in musical activities and education.

The club sponsored many activities including: a student Messiah reception; meetings with guest speakers on topics like jazz band, swing choir, and marching band; opportunities to attend master classes and get-acquainted times with artists and guest speakers on campus. Any student interested was welcome to join or attend one of our meetings. We strived to develop the appreciation of many types of music on campus. (P. Degner)

Pizza parties, a car wash, a field trip to Midwest Stock Exchange and the Federal Reserve Bank and the annual banquet were all things that the Business Club had going on throughout the year. The club also sponsored two films, one of them being "The Hiding Place."

The purpose of the Business Club was to stimulate interest in the business world, build relationships between faculty and students, and to integrate Christ in our future as business leaders. The club was open to business majors, minors, or students who had an interest in business. (N. Aylor)

Secretarial Club

Secretarial Club was a fairly new club, forming as an extension from Business Club. It was focused toward Secretarial Science, Business Education and Office Administration majors or minors.

The year held a variety of events for this club. Bowling, special speaker Linda Allen, a Christmas banquet and caroling, and selling stuffed animals plus other events kept the club members busy.

The clubs goals were: to learn, to be of service, and to have fun. Scholarships for secretarial majors were also available through the club. (N. Aylor)

Home EconomicsClub

Home Economics Club had a busy year sponsoring late skates, movies, selling carnations and stationery and sponsoring a bridal show.

The purpose of the club was to have fun with fellow home ec students and to let people on campus realize home ec was more than girls that cook and sew, who were looking for husbands.

The qualifications were to be a home economics student, at least for one class.

The club had a great year, as the club grew and did some all-school fundraisers. (N. Hendrickson) ports — The athletic activity requiring skill or physical prowess and a competitive nature. As each season came around students waited anxiously to cheer their Tigers on!

The new year began with the football players dragging in one week before classes began. Each player was doing his best to get in shape and prepare for the new season. This team grew both in maturity and spiritually as a group and as individuals.

The cheerleaders took out the pom-poms, cleaned the uniforms, bought new shoes, and the practices began. Activities began — and with the help of the cheerleaders the year began with enthusiasm and spirit. Their pep rallies revved up the spectators and Tiger fans.

The girls had their tennis practice and a season full of cancellations. In spite of this they worked hard and remained dedicated.

Those too unsure of their athletic abilities participated in intramurals and played against their friends. Intramurals were a time for students to play competitively "just for fun."

The basketball season brought with it a string of excitement and enthusiasm like our college has never had. The bleachers filled and the spirit was felt by all who attended.

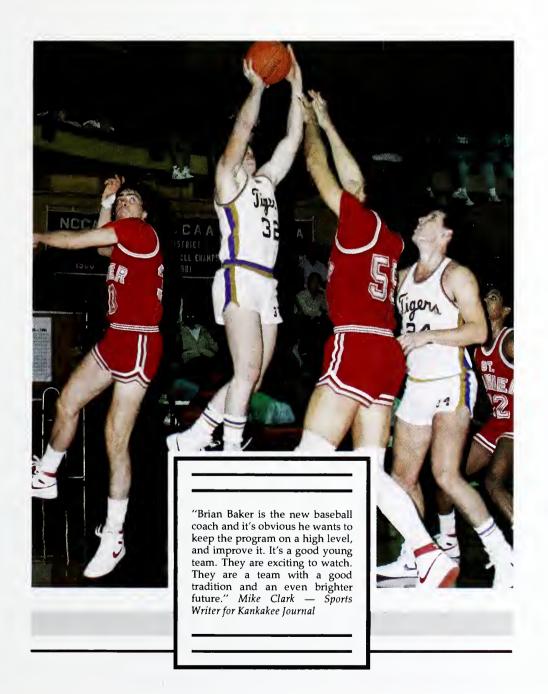

As each athlete, in each sport activity began his season, he recalled past experiences on the team and wondered how he would contribute to the activity. Those who were spectators knew they would always remember those groups of students who worked so hard and developed new talents or strengthened natural abilities.

They were respected for their abilities, and they were noticed . . .

Mike won both the 10,000 and 5,000 meter races at NCCAA, in which he holds the school record, and qualified for the NAIA National Track and Field Meet. When Mike is asked to what he attributes his success, he replies, "I Corinthians 10:31 says, '... Whatever you do, do it all for the glory of God." Whenever Mike runs, he takes that verse to heart. The cheerleading program at ONC has taken a quantum leap forward this year. It began with the squad's decision to "go all out and become the best." This resulted in the form of brand new, top-of-the line uniforms and a trip to Virginia to a college cheerleading camp taught by some of the finest cheerleaders in the country. For five days the squad cheered and made friends with other squads from the top universities. The squad grew close and returned to school with many fresh ideas to excite and thrill the crowd. There always was an unprecedented enthusiasm and crowd involvement that made the games fun no matter what the score. A quote from an experienced cheerleading authority sums it up well. "It is rare to find this high caliber of a program at a school this size." The 1985-86 cheerleaders will always look back fondly at the fun, friends, hard work and closeness that came with being a part of this year's ONC cheerleading squad.

KENTON HASSELBRING

Senior Kenton Hassel-bring has been a dynamic basketball player for ONC for the past four years. One word to describe Kenton is "competitiveness." No matter what he ever did, Kenton gave it one-hundred and ten percent, and he was a tremendous example for others to follow. I can say I have never seen a more committed person who was willing to sacrifice himself for a cause. However, ther was also another side of Kenton that most people do not know about. He is a very kind and caring person to his friends and family, and a person I have grown to depend on. Also, Kenton has always been one of the greatest practical jokers of all time. He always kept the team in laughter and made sure throughout the entire year, that they did not get too serious. All in all, I have always been glad to call Kenton Hasselbring my friend. The 1985-86 season was a combination of the old and the new. The talent of the Tigers came from the established play of Seniors Leander, Hasselbring, Thill, and Davis. That experience combined with the great Freshman talent of Jeff Prather and Brooks Koble proved to be an exciting combination for Tiger fans.

FROM RAGS TO RICHES

Cheers were heard at the Soccer field as another game was won. The hard work and endless practices had finally paid off. This year was the best ever for the Soccer team, for they broke every record held at ONC. What caused the change? Never before has the team been so unified. Every player is important, and therefore they work as a team. A combination of good coaching and team work has made the Soccer team number one at ONC.

STU BOICE

Captain Stu Boice has always been a vital part of the soccer team. He was goalie his first two years and wing the last two. This year Boice led in assists and was second in goals scored. One thing Stu liked about Soccer is there's no main player. Every member depends on the others, resulting in a unified team. Stu never failed to give his best playing soccer.

SCOTT GOSELIN

As a Sophomore, Scott Goselin has made a pretty big decision in his life. The second year player decided to drop basketball and pursue a possible career in baseball. He wanted to use the winter months in training for the Spring team. As he says, "Athletes are made in the off season." Although he does golf for ONC, he has committed his time to baseball, since baseball is his first love. Besides his pursuit of a professional career, Scott has another goal, "A good education." He is majoring in Sports Medicine. If baseball does not work out, he will always have something to fall back on. Scott chose Olivet, not only because of its up and coming baseball program, but also for its noticeable Christian atmosphere. As a teammate, I can see first hand his desire to play, and his extreme dedication to his first love. (Bill Burdine)

PLAYER PROFILE GREG HARRELL

This season has been the best for the golf team. Once again, they finished first in the Tiger Invitational and placed fourth in the Chicagoland Conference. One of the key members is returning letterman Greg Harrell. Playing for the past 11 years has given Greg expertise in the game. Harrell was named to the Chicagoland All-Conference Team. Greg views golf not only as competitive but enjoyable. "I have had fun playing golf. With the team's performances and meeting personal goals in the sport, I feel that this experience has been a successful one." Through practice, interest and support, Greg has been noticed as one of Olivet's finest golfers.

Introducing . . . Mr. Wendy Parsons

Wendy Parsons, native of Eureka, Illinois, and Olivet graduate of 1956, joined our athletic department this year as The Director of Student Retention and Intramurals. He has also recently been appointed the head coach of men and women's track and field. For the past twenty-seven years, Parsons has dedicated himself to education, serving in various positions including: superintendent, teacher, principal, and always coach.

When asked what made him decide to come back to Olivet, he stated, "It was a new challenge. I had become stagnant in my job. It was time to move on, and I've always wanted to return to Olivet." Mr. Parsons has definitely met this challenge head on. His job as director of retention includes eating meals with students, getting to know them, building a rapport with them and serving as a mediator between the administration and the students. "You have no idea how many students are hurting. If they decide not to come back, I want to find out why and see if I can help." Parsons commented.

As far as the Intramural program is concerned, he came in with the strategy of including everyone, and he has successfully followed through with this goal. "If I put everyone on a team, then the students who are usually left out will be included. I feel the students who get involved with intramural sports will be more well rounded because of it," Parsons said. "My goal is to include everyone who wants to participate."

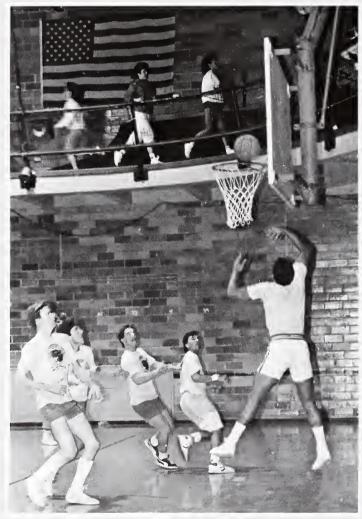

Thank you for your consistent dedication and enthusiasm. We, the Tigers, welcome you with open paws. (K. Lobb)

"Intramurals this year has taken on a totally new type of organization. At first it seemed to be somewhat confusing. You were introduced to many new people whom you had never played with before. This in itself created minor difficulties for the teams. However, in the end, I could see the good in this kind of program. It provided opportunities for more people to participate in the activities. Also, new friendships were created," commented Paul Shaver, captain of the Jaguars.

PLAYER PROFILE DAWN PRESCHER

"I think the #1 most important thing in basketball, aside from skill, is your mental attitude; it's all in your mind. If you set goals, and ask God to help you achieve them and say I can do it, you can do it, that's all there is to it." This is the very attitude which has motivated Dawn Prescher throughout high school and her two years here at Olivet. In high school she lettered all four years as a varsity player, received honorable mention and was named to the All-Conference Team. By no means did her accomplishments stop there. This year, as well as last year, she was accorded the All-Tournament Player. Also, as high scorer in the 1984 season, Dawn was chosen for the All-District Team. For Dawn, basketball has produced many positive rewards, and she definitely has reached the goal of striving to be the best. K. Lobb)

FANATICS

The many, the obnoxious, the Fan-atics. These people are a special breed ... they're loud, temperamental, opinionated, hyperactive, uncontrollable, threatening, complainers, but always faithful. These addicts can be found freezing at a football game, getting drenched at a soccer game or getting the opposing team's coach a technical foul during a basketball game. It amazes me to see such sweet angelical people during daylight turn into such ugly creatures of habit when the game starts. But I wouldn't want to see it any other way . . . to the addicts I take my hat off and pray that you never lose your spirit. We are the school motivators; the many, the obnoxious, the Fan-atics. "ATHLETICS DEDICATED TO CHRIST-LIKENESS"

Through seven years of devotion as head football coach, Ken Richardson never failed to display his strong example as a coach dedicated to Christlikeness. The ONC football program underwent many changes as a result of Richardson's dedication. The Tigers experienced their best season in 1982 with a seven-three record, while the defensive team received national rankings.

Richardson was not only a coach but an originator. During the 1982 season, Homecoming included football for the first time. The 1985 season started off with a pre-season Alumni game, which included players from the first year football was included in Olivet's sports program. Also, parents and seniors were honored on special days. The theme for the team became P.A.W. (Positive Attitudes Win). This resulted in a more unified team. Although P.A.W. did not always prove true, Richardson never stopped giving his 100% dedication to the football program. He also carried a strong devotion to his players, for Richardson was more than a coach — he was a friend.

COACH

Coach: one who instructs players in the fundamentals of a competitive sport and directs team strategy. This is the job that every Olivet coach takes seriously. Complete dedication is a common characteristic found in every person on the Tiger coaching staff. Most importantly ONC coaches strive to lead their players in "Athletics dedicated to Christ-likeness." Through practice and hard work the coaches create teams with winning seasons. The coaches strive to maintain unity among the team members. The long, exhausting practices of running an extra mile or working on drills a little longer than normal have taught the players to work together. The coaches motivate their players to do their very best, both as a team and individually. Olivet's coaches deserve the respect they receive from every athlete for their support, hard work, and continual dedication.

eautiful color spreads depicting the year's most memorable activities, the special divisions, and individuals covering the pages of a yearbook are only possible because of the things no one notices — advertisements.

The advertisements are sold to virtually anyone who wished to advertise their goods for a minimal cost and support the yearbook staff efforts.

Churches across the educational region contribute an endless number of advertisements to show their pride in the students attending our college.

Local merchants contribute to our efforts because they believe in Olivet students and wish to support us in the same manner we support them. Without advertisements no one would know that Olivet has several new academic opportunities for students. Neither would they be aware of what our college has to offer. The college advertises through Christian magazines, newspapers, letters, handbooks and students passing the word.

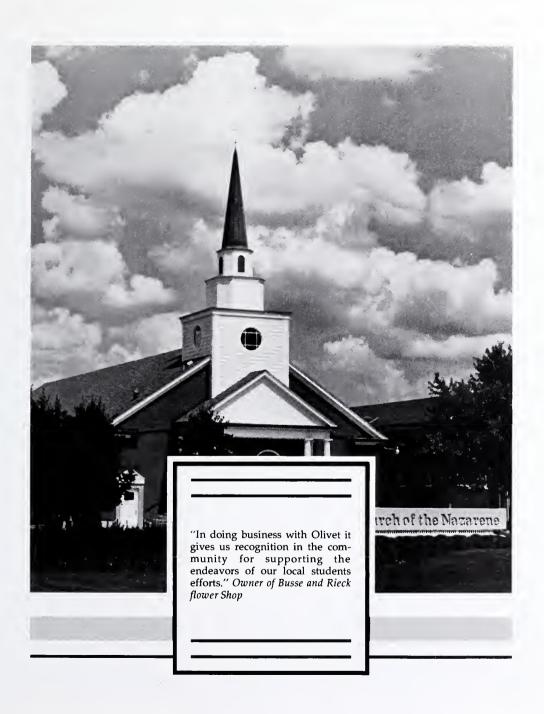

Olivet developed a new method of advertising about our institution this year. Recruitment — having students calling students and telling them about Olivet. A form of advertising which relates to the students directly.

Olivet offers prospective students many educational experiences. As an accredited school, Olivet offered its students an education and opportunities for social and spiritual growth

THE WISCONSIN DISTRICT CONGRATULATES THE CLASS OF '86. AS YOU LEAVE THE CAMPUS MAY YOU CONTINUE TO GROW IN BODY, SOUL, MIND, AND SPIRIT. OUR DISTRICT HAS ADOPTED THE PHILOSOPHY OF GROWTH THROUGH PLANTING NEW CHURCHES. IN THE LONG RUN THIS WILL STRENGTHEN THE CHURCH IN EVERY WAY. EVEN

PROVIDING NEW STUDENTS FOR OLIVET. BETWEEN THE GENERAL ASSEMBLIES OF 1980 AND 1985, TEN NEW CHURCHES WERE STARTED AND ORGANIZED, HELPING US TO EXPERIENCE GROWTH IN FOUR VITAL AREAS.

THE WISCONSIN DISTRICT HAD:

a 6.40% gain in church membership

a 15.08% gain in enrollment

a 10.67% gain in average attendance

a 36.48% gain in $ raised for all purposes

WE GIVE GOD THE PRAISE AND GLORY FOR HIS BLESSING IN HELPING US TO GROW.

OLIVET MAZARENE COLLEGE

KEEPING TRACK

It seems only fitting that here at the end of this book we pause and reflect on the one thing that binds us all, the one thing that ties us to each other and to the college we love. It's the one thing we hold in common, and yet is unique for each individual. And no matter what you take with you from this school, there's at least one thing our Olivet has given to each and every one of us. There is not one single one of us who won't leave here without our own student ID number to have, hold, and love forever.

I think I speak for every student when I say we have grown to love our own individual numbers. Up to three times a day they've been the key to a meal. They've given us an identity in the vast world of the school's computer-banks. And they've protected us through the years, allowing us to hide behind them when test-grades were posted. Sustenance, identity and protection, three pretty important things for those of us away from home for the first time. How could we not feel a sense of indebtedness towards our numbers?

Our time here is limited. We will all eventually move on. Others will come, move into our old rooms, eat our leftovers, and use our old "Exploring the Old Testament" workbooks. There's one thing they won't have of ours, though, and that's our numbers. When we leave, those go with us forever. Our numbers will be retired.

821526, you won't be getting used much anymore. I'll be forced by a cold, impersonal world to move on to more "formal" and "grown-up" numbers, like 615-55-2887, and leave behind the numbers of my youth, but I won't forget you.

O.N.C. SURVIVAL EQUIPMENT

One should never underestimate the immense power of the most ridiculed; yet most important piece of ONC Survival Equipment ... The mighty Olivet ID. To the untrained and the unexperienced, the ID card is simply a glorified, laminated meal pass or a lifetime membership to the Artist/Lecture series.

After a few months of special training however, one may begin to tap its unforseen power. For instance, if one gets in trouble with the law for such a capital offense as exceeding the speed limit, one quickly learns to furnish the officer with an Olivet ID instead of one's drivers license. The policeman will then correctly assume that one probably couldn't read the digits on the speed limit sign anyway, and one will promptly be released. Also, one may gain entrance into many other important elite places besides SAGA. With nothing more than one's precious little ID card (and a little practice), one may find himself in restricted offices, corporate meetings, even strategic military outposts! Yes, all one has to do is slide that ID in the little crack between a door and the wall and . . . (B. Cherry)

Losing your homework, your balance on ice, or your girlfriend were bad situations — losing your ID was devastating! Tim Atchley flashes his prized possession. Photo by Z. Burdine Rt. 1, Box 298 Momence, IL 60954

Chuck Johnson enjoys the chance to escape from being "a face in the crowd." Though many times we felt we were just one of many numbers there was usually at least one person keeping track of just you. Photo by J. Springer  Reedy, Susan M. 411 Francis Bourbonnais, IL 60914 163

I.D. NUMBERED BASKETBALL JERSEYS?

After spending 4 years at Olivet I'm beginning to feel like a walking ID number. I feel a little bit like Ivan Pavlov's slobbering dog. I've been conditioned to say "1346" if I want something to eat. One of these days I'm going to catch myself going into McDonald's trying to get a double cheeseburger, fries, Sprite and a box of McDonaldland cookies with my ID card. Ronald McDonald would not be a happy camper.

Who knows maybe one of these days they'll use ID numbers on the basketball jerseys. Picture it. There we are in Birchard watching the Tigers do their thing. The ref comes over to the scorer's table; "We've got a player control foul on number 811346. Number 847683 will be shooting a 1 and 1." I feel sorry for the equipment manager. He would have to get "Refrigerator-Sized" uniforms just so the numbers would fit.

After 4 years of school, I have "found myself." I will live on in infamy as ... ''811346.'' (R. Thilĺ)

YEAR TO REMEMBER

"And our homecoming queen for 1986 is Miss Teressa Beth Ulmet." Teresa smiled at Mrs. Parrott's mispronunciation of her name. She wasn't smiling just because of the mispronunciation, but because the student body had just elected her queen of the homecoming activities. For Teresa, I'm sure, the 1985-86 school year was a "year to remember." It was for all of us.

Our school witnessed the building of the long-awaited ice-skating rink and warming house. The project was undertaken by Associated Student Government under the leadership of Student Body President Rod Thill. The skating rink provided many hours of recreation for Olivet students.

First semester was brought to a close with the 50th year presentation of Handel's Messiah. For the special occasion, guest alumni singers were brought in for the Saturday performance. Student soloists performed in the annual Sunday presentation.

But nothing was so exciting as the Midwest's backing of the Chicago Bears in the Superbowl XX. Olivet did not escape the excitement as T.V. rooms were packed across campus to watch as the Bears womped on the New England Patriots. Although the Bears had won seven NFL

Championships, it was their first time to win the Superbowl. The "Refrigerator" became more than a household appliance and students all over campus were heard chanting the famous "Superbowl Shuffle."

However, the chanting died out and the Bears' glory quickly faded as the announcement of the space shuttle explosion shocked America. Those same T.V. rooms were jammed with students staring in disbelief. It was the first time our generation had witnessed such a national disaster. The tragedy bonded the nation as we realized just how uncertain and risky the space program really was.

In trying to forget the scar the Challenger left behind, we pushed onward to bring back an American light-heartedness. Thoughts were focused inward as Steve Davis was chosen Mr. ONC 1986. Spirits were high and laughter returned to the campus.

We proved that we could bounce back from anything. We mingled tears and laughter in 1985-86 and made this year a year to remember." (L. Johnson)

Ron Angles ... In ten years I should finally be finished at Olivet, finished with medical school, finished with my residency and ready to assume my role as a doctor. Because the first thirty years of my life were spent enlarging my personal debt, the next few years will be spent getting rid of it! Photo by J. Frey

Picture Yourself

What will you be doing in ten years?

When someone asks a senior what he will be doing when he graduates, many times he'll answer, "I don't know." This is the dreaded question that most seniors don't want to hear. But there are some of the seniors with their act together that know exactly what they want to do with their life after four years at Olivet. As for the other people, they will probably just wait to see what opportunities crop up for them. We asked a few seniors to stop and think what they would be doing in ten years.

Milo Singleton . . . After spending hundreds of hours practicing at WKOC and Parrott Hall, I plan to make a career at an old fashioned traditional station in Wyoming. Photo by J. Frey

Tom Herrmann . . . In ten years, I hope to be teaching mathematics or physical education at a high school. I also hope to be a coach in football, baseball, and possibly basketball. Photo by J. Frey

UN BREAKABLE TIES

Friendship . . . Power to Unite vastly different people

A warm summer afternoon ... seabreeze ... a beach ... sand! Sloping gently from the immovable land into the turbulant sea, sand eternally bonds the two. Though land and sea differ as night and day. The flexibility and softness of cool sand integrates and unites them forever. So it is with true friendship, flexible and soft. That it has the power to unite so many vastly different people with its timeless devotion.

As sand becomes rock in the ocean's depths, so friendship grows stronger as we allow it to touch the deepest regions of our souls. If we allow its formations to build, one upon the other, the friendship becomes solid; fortified and protected from all harm that threatens to tear it down . . . and then becomes unbreakable ties. (B. Cherry)

A RADICAL DEPARTURE =

SENIORS AT LAST! We had waited three and a half years to get where we were. Finally, the light at the end of the tunnel was visible. So what were we doing? We were anxious about graduation and excited about our futures. But, what were we really doing? Underneath our mature, calm expressions, we were going crazy. Our final semester was a time of reverting back to our freshman years with all the fun and breaking of rules. Only by now, most of us had learned how not to get caught. It was a time of late night studying at restaurants because we were sick of our dorm rooms. We spent hours in the library studying ... and goofing off. (Like trying to see if we could throw our friend's gloves on top of the moose head in Benner Library. Right Brian?) Pranks, jokes, and laughs became part of our last semester as we began to meet with fellow classmates for the last time. Enlarged calendars were hung up in many dorms so that the days until graduation could be counted down. In fact, a few wise souls kept track of how many Saga meals they had left to eat. Committee meetings kept many seniors busy and nearly killed one member after he was "accidentally" struck by another member. Nice move Chuck.

Senior pictures were interesting as we tried to make one giant pyramid (emphasis on tried). A few of us showed up for the pictures looking rather odd . . . and yet they seemed to fit right in with the class.

We tried desperately to remain relaxed; but we knew that soon we'd be gone and a new life would be ours to explore. The anticipation was building ... we wanted out! And yet in all our hilariousness, a quiet spirit pervaded our thoughts as we realized that soon our Radical Departure would set us free. (D. Starkweather)

And let endurance have its perfect result, that you may be perfect and complete, lacking in nothing. James 1:4

What a staff!
THANKS TO
ALL OF YOU,
FOR YOUR
EFFORT AND DEDICATION.
I
YOU ALL!

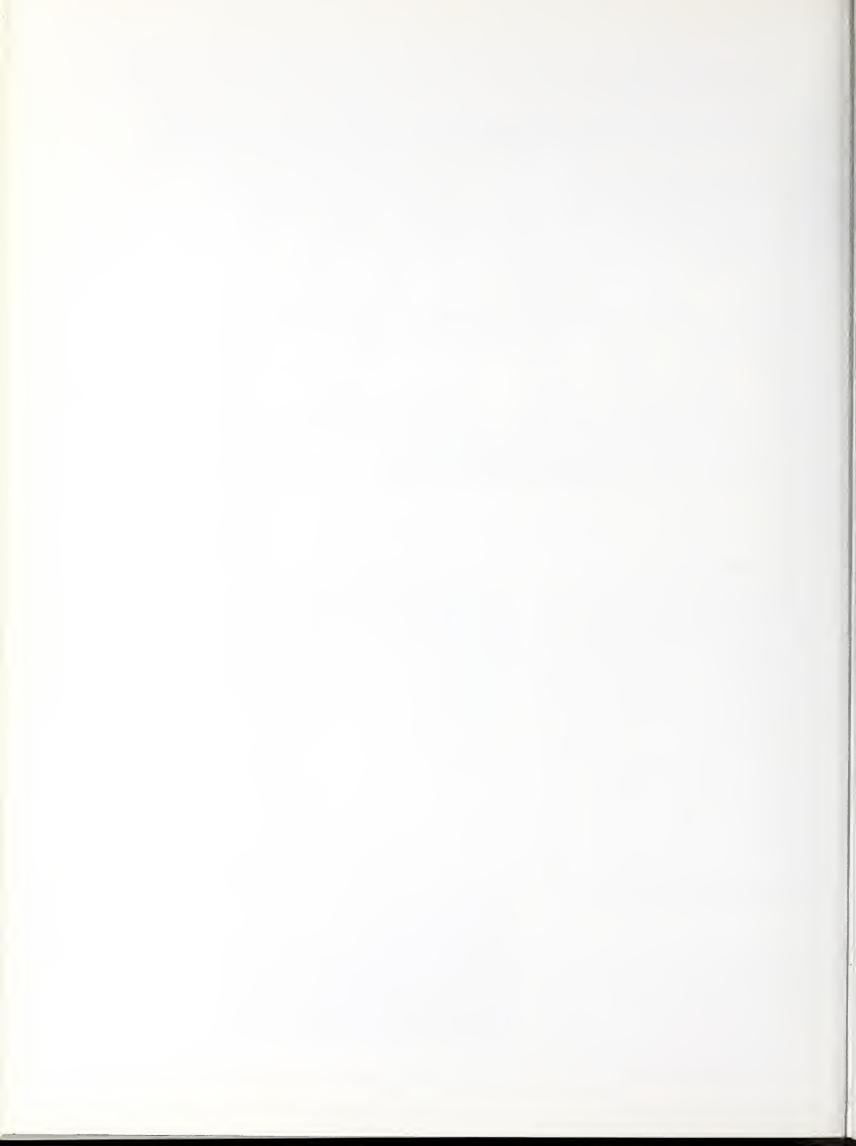

A very special thank you to Gordon Wickersham, our sponsor, for his support, dedication, and standard for the excellence of our book. On a personal note, Gordon, I appreciate all your help, in more ways than one. Your support of my efforts was remarkable and your concern for me, personally, was far above your "line of duty." I've grown to appreciate and love you as a friend, as well as a supportive sponsor. Thanks!

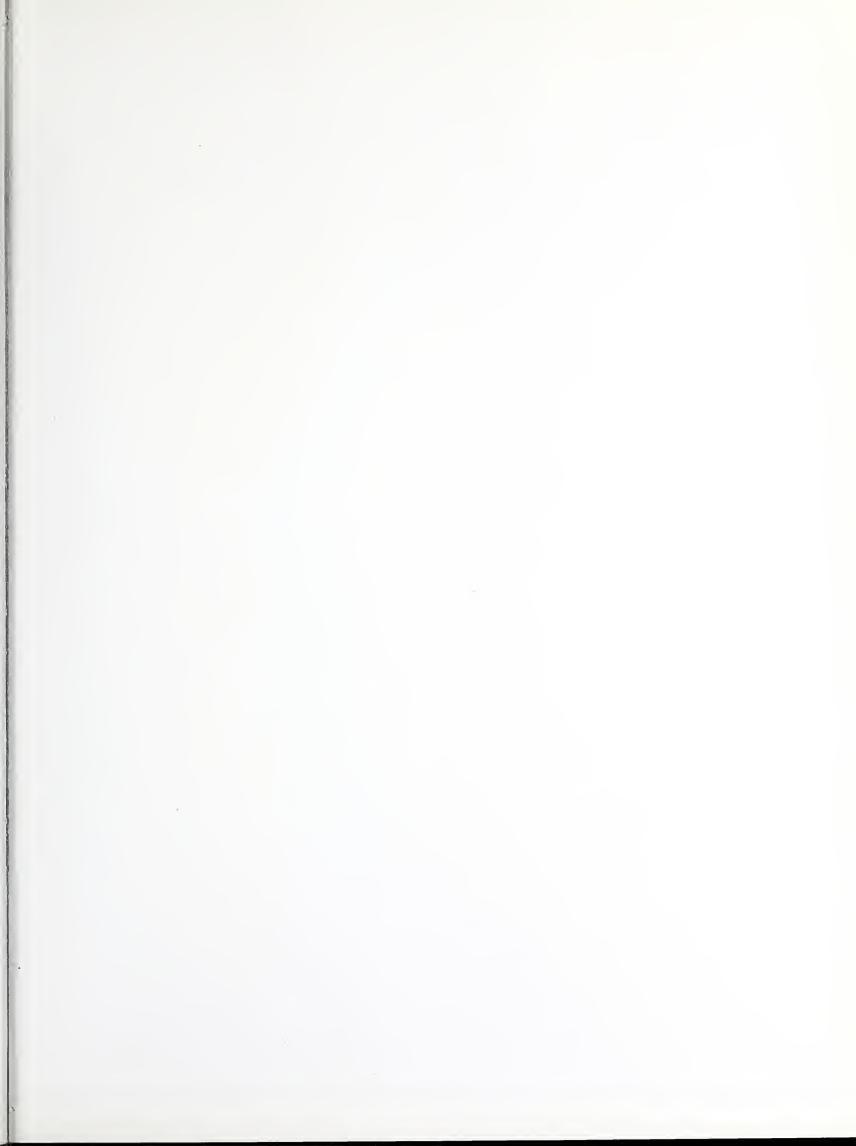

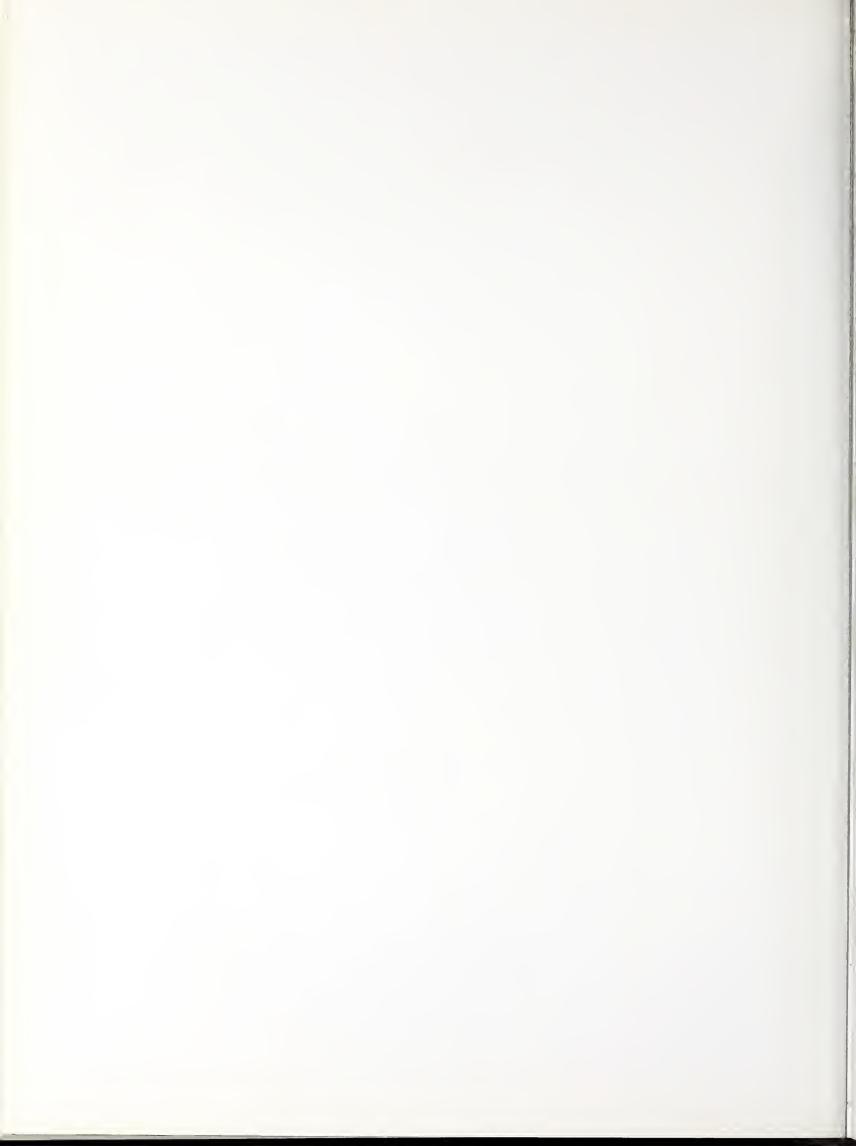

Thanks to Ray Parpart for his eager and willing spirit to take over as our "head photographer," for the second semester. Ray, your hard work and dedication is greatly appreciated. Also, a thanks to Jim Springer our head photographer first semester.

REFLECTIONS

What a year! It started with excitement and anticipation and ended with accomplishment and exhaustion. The "in-betwenn" was a mixture of senioritis, fatigue, and sheer fun!

Being the Editor of the 1986 Aurora, "They Had To Notice," has been my biggest responsibility. The learning experience was remarkable and the close contact developed with my staff was incredible. When you eat, sleep, and live yearbook, as my staff and I have, you grow. When a deadline approaches and All-nighters are in order, you really get to know people, and that we have. This is an experience that I would not change for the world!

Thanks for the opportunity for serving you as Editor. And a special thanks to my staff and sponsor, Gordon Wickersham, for all their support, dedication, and hard work. Editor in Chief, Zoe Burdine
